COMMON COUNCIL.

A meeting of the common council was held Monday evening in the council chamber at City Hall, with President George A. Mead in the chair.

The order for a hearing Oct. 5 and 12 on taking land for sewers between Carlton and Emerson street was adopted in concurrence.

An order for the construction of a sewer on Arlington street came down from board of aldermen.

Councilman Bothfeld thought an explanation of the order in question should be made before the council. The order asking for permission to construct a sewer on Arlington street was not presented to the board of aldermen until after the sewer had been put in and the work nearly completed. The sewer committee did not favor the order and had not, to his knowledge acted upon it, but it was presented and passed the board. The members of the sewerage committee having seats in the common council received no notice of a meeting for the purpose of considering the presentation of the Arlington street order to the board, and were unaware of the order until it appeared in the board. "I hardly know from what cause such a thing should occur," said the councilman from Ward Seven. "Whether from haste in constructing the sewer or the thoughtlessness of the chairman in calling the committee?" "The members of the common council should be allowed to do their part in the various committees on which they are supposed to serve, and it is unjust to the abutters to give them no opportunity for a hearing before laying the sewer." The members of the common council have a perfect right to demand courteous treatment in committee affairs."

A recommendation was received for water main on Florence near Boylston street, from the board of health. Petitions were received for street light corner of Webster and Waltham streets; for sidewalk grading and construction on Judkins and Jefferson streets; for proper drainage of Irving street; for street light on Pearl near Jewett street; cross-walk corner of Pearl and Thornton streets; for fire alarm signal box corner of Woodward and Chestnut streets; for street light on Hyde street, and for sidewalk on Park and Elmwood streets.

Councilman Moulton said that Hyde street had not been accepted as a street by the city, although it was now thickly populated and many fine residences were there erected. The street has no lights and is very dark. The city has hitherto refused to take action toward accepting the street, although petitions have been sent in and it was quite necessary that lights should be placed there.

Considerable concurrent business was disposed of and the council adjourned at 7:35 after a 20 minute session.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

GLOBE THEATRE—Mlle. Rhea in Mr. Alexander's new play "Judith" is the attraction at the Globe this week. It has attracted large audiences and has won much favorable comment. The usual matinee will be given Saturday afternoon followed by the evening performance. Margaret Mather will follow Mlle. Rhea at Mr. Stetson's popular amusement house, beginning her engagement Monday evening Oct. 5. The repertory is as follows—"Romeo and Juliet," Monday and Thursday evenings and Saturday matinee; "The Violin Maker" and "The Honeycomb," Tuesday night; "The Lady of Lyons" at the Wednesday matinee; "Leah, the Forsaken," Wednesday and Friday evenings; "Nance Oldfield" and "Medea," for the closing performance Saturday night.

BOSTON THEATRE—"The Old Home-stead" is a popular attraction and crowded houses are witnessing the presentations of the piece at the Boston Theatre. The scenic effects have never been surpassed in any previous production of the play and Mr. Denman Thompson is supported by an excellent company. Mr. Thompson's delineation of the principal character in the drama is an admirable bit of ideal work which wins and deserves the approbation of the theatre-going public. The piece is clean, has a well-defined plot and abounds in those interesting and realistic incidents which sustain the interest of the spectators. People in Newton who desire to avail themselves of the present engagement, should complete their arrangements as early as possible.

HOLLY STREET THEATRE—Miss Rose Coghlan is booked at the Hollis for a week's engagement which commenced last Monday evening. Her new piece, "Dorothy's Dilemma" is pronounced a success. The initial performances were given in Philadelphia where it had a popular run and its presentation in Boston is a repetition of the success which marked its production in the Quaker city. The piece abounds in comical situations and introduces Miss Coghlan in the first act in the uniform of an officer of the Zouaves mounted on a spotted horse. The costuming in the closing act displays some elegant gowns and the stage setting and scenes are very pretty and ingenious. Mr. John J. McNulty, the new skit, "Boys and Girls," which has proved a great success in New York, will follow Miss Coghlan at the Hollis, opening Oct. 5 for a week's engagement.

Why suffer from sore muscles? Johnson's Analine Liniment makes them very pliable.

I Was A Fool.

"Yes, they said I was a fool not to try Sulphur Bitters for Rheumatism, from which I had suffered for years. I did not know any such false doctors and medicines without getting relief that I was discouraged. I am now on my fourth bottle and almost cured. I was a fool that I didn't try that wonderful remedy before.—C. G. Pratt, Manchester, N. H.

Just as Good.

Say some dealers who try to sell a substitute preparation when a customer calls for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Do not allow any such false dealers to induce you to buy their medicine. We do not want. Remember that the only reason for making it is that a few more cents profit will be made on the substitute. Insist upon having the best medicine—Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is peculiar to itself.

My Family Doctor.

For the last two years has been Sulphur Bitters, and until I began using them in my family we had not more or less sickness, and our doctor's bill was never so large. Since we began their use, we have had no doctor to pay, and three dollars invested in Sulphur has kept health in our family.—E. Knott, Postmaster, Waverly, Iowa.

The proprietors of Ely's Cream Balm do not claim it to be a cure-all, but a remedy for catarrh, colds in the head and hay fever. It is not a liquid or a salve, it is easily applied into the nostrils. It gives relief at once. 60c.

RECEPTION TO MRS. HARRISON.

LADIES OF THE NEWTON CLUB GREET THE FIRST LADY IN THE LAND.

Youth, beauty and social distinction combined to make the reception tendered the presidential party by the ladies of the Newton Club, Saturday, a most brilliant affair. The invitations read from "4 to 6," and during that time, some 600 ladies visited the old Gen. Hull mansion, the present abode of the Newton Club.

Although the affair was an impromptu one, gotten up at the last moment, as the engagements of Mrs. Harrison decided, it was a grand social event.

Private carriages blocked the way and white-gloved policemen guarded the entrances. A canopy stretched from the curbstone to the main entrance, which was fringed with fern, fronds and variegated gladioli.

Mrs. H. Henry Sacker, Miss Edith Stoll, Miss E. Kate Emery, Mrs. William H. Emery, Miss Emerson, Miss Mary King Garrison, Miss Lovett, Miss Hibsch, Mrs. Edward Husted, Mrs. N. H. Bryant, Mrs. J. S. Leonard, Miss Damon, Miss Carrie I. Coppins, Mrs. M. H. Kimball, Miss Arnold, Mrs. Austin R. Mitchell, Mrs. E. J. Towne, West Newton, Mrs. E. Estes, Mrs. J. S. Palmer, Mrs. E. H. Haines, Newton, Mrs. A. F. Cooke, Miss Beatrix Cooke, Mrs. Wm. Follett, Newton, Miss Langford, Newton, Mrs. W. H. Freeman, West Newton, Miss E. A. Lawrence, Miss Francis Baldwin, Miss Sarah Davis, Miss Carrie S. Coppins, Mrs. Wm. H. Allen, Mrs. J. E. Whitman, Mrs. E. H. Goodrich, Miss Alice Smith.

The gentlemen of the club were strictly prohibited from attending, but Gen. Banks ventured to come over from Waltham, and was cordially welcomed, as were also Messrs. W. J. Follett, chairman of the executive committee of the club; J. E. Hollis and George T. Coppins, the latter gentlemen superintending affairs generally. Mr. H. E. Cobb, president of the club, was also present.

CHILDREN THREW FLOWERS.

MRS. HARRISON AND THE M'KEE TAKE A LITTLE TRIP TO CONCORD.

Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. McKee and the two children visited old Concord Tuesday and viewed all the many objects of historical interest in that town.

It was a day of much interest for the entire party, and the incidents of the day and the places visited were possessed of much significance. The party started from the Woodland Park Hotel shortly before 8 o'clock, and were driven to Waltham, where they departed for Concord by train.

Arriving at their destination about 10 o'clock they were met by Mrs. Lothrop, the wife of Dr. Lothrop, and Hon. E. S. Barrett, the president of the Massachusetts Sons of the Revolution and the chairman of the Concord school board, and driven to the home of Mrs. Lothrop.

After a short stay the party took carriages and were driven to the school houses of the town, where a very pretty incident occurred. The school children had been drawn up in front of the buildings, and as the carriage containing Mrs. Harrison and the McKee children passed along, the little ones cheered and threw into the vehicle bouquets and loose flowers in profusion.

Mrs. Harrison graciously acknowledged the honor and waved her handkerchief in response to this expressive greeting, and Baby McKee seemed highly delighted being showered with flowers by the children.

After luncheon at the residence of Mrs. Lothrop the party started off again and visited the Sleepy Hollow cemetery, the battle ground of the revolution and the old North bridge, the Minute man and its inscriptions, the abode of the Concord school of philosophy, the old manse and the house of Mr. Davis and its rare collection of revolutionary and other relics.

The party returned on an early train to Waltham, and were driven thence to the Woodland Park Hotel at Auburndale.

Sunday Mrs. Harrison and Mr. and Mrs. McKee, accompanied by Mr. Moses W. Richardson, attended divine service in the Old South Church, Boston. The party were driven to church in a landau drawn by black horses. The route from the Woodland Park Hotel was through Fuller and Homer streets to Newton Centre, thence via Beacon street and Commonwealth avenue to the Back Bay district, returning through Longwood, Brookline and the Newtons.

The Harrison party occupied Mr. Richardson's pew during the services. The pulpit was occupied by Rev. Josiah Strong of New York city, and a special musical service, prepared by Organist Carr, was finely rendered, the vocal numbers being admirably executed by the quartet choir.

Mrs. Harrison remained in her apartment after returning to the hotel, Mr. and Mrs. McKee with "Baby" and Ben, Jr., however, enjoying their customary drive in the afternoon behind Mr. McKee's handsome pair.

The toilets of the ladies were mostly of silk, the younger element being arrayed in the lighter textures, while many were in lawn costumes.

Mrs. Harrison wore a black moire silk, trimmed with old rose, and capote of sage green velvet and steel.

Mrs. Hibbard wore a gown of black gros grain embroidered with daisies with a bonnet of black lace and jat.

Mrs. Russell wore black lace, with jet garniture.

Mrs. Powers wore shrimp pink china silk.

Miss Welch was charmingly gowned in a Grecian frock of white china silk, embroidered with tiny pink roses, a broad Leghorn hat trimmed with white ostrich feathers completing the toilet.

The new clubhouses has already been started, the plans for which were laid on a table for inspection. The ladies will have attractive apartments, and to provide for furnishing them a four-days' fete will be held commencing Oct. 13, on the grounds of the present clubhouse.

Cospicuous among the guests were:

Mrs. J. G. Wildman, Mrs. C. B. Bushell, Miss Buswell, Mrs. Richard Anders of West Newton; Mrs. J. W. Davis, Mrs. C. P. Darling, Mrs. Dwight Chester, Miss E. C. Chester, Mrs. J. T. Langford, Mrs. J. ALLEN ON THE SALT TARIFF.

HIS STATEMENTS DON'T SEEM TO AGREE WITH THE FACTS.

To the Editor of the Herald: I notice in the report of the speech of the Republican candidate, Mr. Charles H. Allen, the following with regard to the duty on salt:

You know the case of salt, because it is familiar to you. Before 1851 we did not have a pound of salt in this country. It was all imported, and salt was worth $2.50 per barrel.

He then argued that the tariff has lowered the price of salt to the present rates.

If Mr. Allen intends to enter into a joint debate with Gov. Russell on the tariff issue, would it not be well for him to enter into some investigation of the salt industry? If he cares to make such inquiry he will find:

1. As far back as 1774 there were flourishing salt works at Harwich, Falmouth, Barnstable and other towns on Cape Cod.

2. In 1802 the salt works of Barnstable represented a capital of $130,000, yielding a net profit of 25 per cent. There were then 136 salt works in Barnstable county alone. In 1809 the Onondaga salt works of New York produced 300,000 bushels annually.

3. In 1829, $77,000 was invested in the salt industry in Massachusetts alone. In 1826, 4,113,000 bushels of salt were manufactured in the United States.

So much as to statistics; now as to prices. In England, at the works, salt is sold at about one-half the average price of American salt, but so high is the proportion of cost of packing and transportation to value, that not a pound can be imported, even duty free.

The tariff on salt was never needed for protection to our salt manufacturers; it simply has served as protection to the combines and trusts which our manufacturers have been able to form under the sheltering wing of "protection."

So great was this monopoly that Senator Hale of Maine, in 1871, said to Congress: "I believe this article should go on the free list; that the monopoly which has obtained heretofore in the Onondaga (Syracuse) salt works as great and complete as any monopoly ever granted by the Tudors in England's most despotic times—should cease."

James A. Garfield called the attention of Congress to the fact that for two years American salt was sold in Toronto, Canada, for $1 a barrel less than on the New York side of the lake.

Both Senator Hale and Congressman Garfield voted in 1871 to put salt on the free list, and in 1880 Levi P. Morton, the present Vice-President voted to the same effect.

In late years the intense competition of the western salt mines has pulled down prices, but the duty is still a heavy burden on the farming classes of our people, who, because of certain chemical properties, must use foreign salt, and the duty increases the price to them.

The farmer who raises the dairy products has to pay this increased cost; also the meat packers and fishermen for curing their fish.

But by a benevolent clause in our tariff the fishermen can import this salt in bond, and the meat packers can have the duty they pay refunded for the meat exported.

Thus this duty is a hardship on the dairy farmer. Even near Syracuse, N.Y., where the best American salt is found, the dairy farmers—representing a vast industry—have to buy foreign salt, because of its peculiar properties.

If the duty is refunded to the fisherman and meat packer, should it not also be refunded to the farmer?

Perhaps Mr. Allen will answer this question in his next lecture on the salt industry.

CHARLES S. HAMLIN.

Brookline, Sept. 23, 1891.

A Pretty Fix.

(Boston Transcript.)

A pretty fix those women's hat-trimmons have got us into! The cases decided against the Government will demand from the treasury nearly $20,000,000. The present cash balance in the treasury is about $44,000,000 of which $17,500,000 is in unavailable fractional coin and $15,000,000 is on deposit in national banks $10,000,000 of matured 4 1/2 per cent. bonds may and probably will be presented for redemption by the 30th. If there had been no tariff, or no women, we should have avoided this dilemma.

It is now claimed that the McKinley medal is made of lead, and therefore poisonous. It has been alleged that the medal was issued to poison the public mind. If it will poison the public body also, its originators builded better than they knew.

McKinley Prices.

(Boston Herald.)

We suppose none of the readers of the Herald expected us, at this late day, to go into a catalogue of the articles on which the McKinley tariff raises prices. Two of these instances came to our attention in one day last week, however, to which, as specimens of many others, we may perhaps, direct attention. Both were testified to by ladies. The first was in the case of a lady preparing to furnish her house with carpets. She went to one of the best known carpet stores in Boston. "You used to sell me bargains in carpets," said she, "have you any now?" The salesmen smiled. "The day of bargains in carpets is over," said he. "The McKinley tariff finished that." She reported that at home, Her husband subsequently asked what the rise in the price of carpets had been, and was told that it was from 10 to 20 per cent. The other instance was when a lady went to purchase an article of attire at a leading dry goods store of Boston. "We used to warrant these goods to you," said the clerk. "We don't do it now. They are made of inferior quality. The manufacturers do this to get them into our market, and even then we shall have to charge you an advanced price. The McKinley tariff has done this." These two instances, we think, will answer for an hour's observation. It will be borne in mind, as shown in the latter case, that when prices are sometimes kept down the public suffers in the quality being reduced. We have reason to believe that this is often the case in our markets.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

SCRIBNER'S.

Much entertainment is to be drawn from Scribner's this month in Mr. Story's "The Corso of Rome," being the fourth of the articles on "The Great Streets of the World," from the new instalment of "The Wrecker," by Robert Louis Stevenson; and from a scientific paper entitled "The Actions of Wounded Animals," by J. N. Hall, M. D. The subjects in the Point of View are "Imagination and Livelihood," "The Caviare Theatre," "Lawrence Oliphant's Life," and "Sancta Simplicia." The illustrations are many and pleasing.

THE WIDE AWAKE.

The October Wide Awake (the D. Lothrop Company) is unusually full of good things, and aside from the contributions from such favorites as Elizabeth Cumins, Margaret Sidney, Mary B. Claffin and R. Lawland E. Robinson, there are also delightful contributions from Lieutenant-Colonel Thorndike, Amanda B. Harris, Esther George, Oscar F. Olive, L. J. Bates, Sharlot M. Hall, Marietta Ambrosi and others. There is poetry by L. S. M., Emma C. Hewett, J. P. Peabody, Celia Richmond, Caroline E. Condit, Mary Grant Major and L. J. Bridgeman. Wide Awake's prospectus for 1892 is a brilliant one.

TOPICS OF THE MONTH.

The principal topics of the month have been the free-coining agitation, apropos of the platforms of different State conventions; the death of Lowell; the banking system, since United States bonds are so nearly all redeemed; and the condition of the farmer and the great crop outlook.

The Forum for October presents discussions of all these in three articles:—Anderson Farrar writes "An English Estimate of Lowell"; Edward A. Wickson on "The Real Meaning of the Free-Coinage Agitation"; the Hon. M. D. Harrer, member of Congress from Ohio, explains "Plan for Permanent Bank System," by substituting good State, municipal, and railroad bonds for Government bonds—a plan that deserves the attention of all students of finance. There are also many other articles of interest.

THE ATLANTIC.

The October Atlantic is an unusually good number, its traditionally high literary standard being fully maintained, and more than the usual number of articles will attract special attention. That by Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, on "Emily Dickenson's Letters," is especially notable, and Colonel Higgins son is here at his best. The tribute to the memory of the late James Russell Lowell by his old friend, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, is especially tender and touching, and the article on General Thomas, by Henry Stone, will be read with great interest as a supplement to the recent paper on "General Sherman," by Mr. John C. Ropes. "The House of Martha," by Frank R. Stockton, reaches a happy conclusion, "The Ascetic Ideal," by Miss Proctor and Miss Dodge, is an exceedingly interesting paper on Saint Jerome. The paper on "The Cave-Dwellers of the Confederacy," and two biographical sketches—one a notice of the late Sir John Macdonald, the Canadian statesman, by Martin J. Griffin, and the other of that modern Erasmus, Ignatius von Dollinger, by E. P. Evans—should not be forgotten. "Mr. Howell's Literary Creed," the closing paper of the number, is a piece of clever literary criticism.

NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE.

Mrs. Wells treats a less difficult if not a more popular subject in her graceful paper on "The Brass Cannon of Campobello," contributed to the New England Magazine. Many persons may be unaware that until within ten years, when her ancestral island was sold by Mrs. Robinson-Owen, the Government of Campobello was semi-feudal, and that Admiral Owen and his descendants had a most loyal tenancy to deal with. The devotion shown by them at the time of the admiral's death is well remembered by people living along the Canadian border, and Mrs. Wells' paper relates to a still more touching evidence of it given a year ago in the reception of young Archibald Cochrane, great-grandson of the admiral and midshipman in the English navy. The boy was accompanied to Campobello by Bishop Medley, the venerable metropolitan of "The Church of England in Canada," and a great part in the occasion was played by the brass cannon which had been taken from the Spaniards by the middy's famous ancestor. The articles in the magazine are "A Pan-American Congress," by E. P. Powell; "Edward Burgess and His Works," by A. G. McVey; and "The University of California," by Charles Howard Shinn.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

Harper's for October opens with the first of two papers by Constance Fenimore Woolson, on "Cairo in 1890," and is finely illustrated, and this is followed by another illustrated article on "The Art Students' League of New York," by Dr. John C. Van Dyke. "Glimpses of Western Architecture," by Montgomery Schuyler, gives the writer's impressions of the architecture of St. Paul and Minneapolis, with views of a number of characteristic buildings in those cities. Frank D. Millet, in "A Courier's Ride," relates the story of an adventure in Bulgaria while serving as war correspondent in the Russo-Turkish war of 1877. Walter Besant's paper on London describes the life of the common people in the Plantagenet period. It is appropriately illustrated. Among other important articles are the "Letters of Charles Dickens to Wilkie Collins," and a popular article on "Common-Sense in Surgery," written by Helen H. Gardner. The fiction of the number includes the continuation of George du Maurier's "Peter Ibbetson," with 14 characteristic illustrations by the author; the conclusion of Mr. Howells' "An Imperative Duty;" a striking short story entitled "A Legend of Sonora," by Hildegard Hawthorne; and "An Unfinished Story," by Richard Harding Davis, a remarkable piece of literary conception. The editorial departments, conducted by George William Curtis, William Dean Howells, and Charles Dudley Warner, are as usual delightfully entertaining.

OUR LITTLE MEN AND WOMEN.

A delightful number of a beautiful magazine for the youngest readers. There are pictures in plenty, large and small; short stories of a page or two, mostly illustrated; verses to please the little folks—and all on fine paper, large type. This magazine cannot fail of being very interesting and helpful to the children whose ages range from five to nine, and it is but $1 a year. D. Lothrop Co., Publishers, Boston.

THE PANSY FOR OCTOBER.

As with all the magazines published by this firm, this is good clear through. We do not have to read all the stories to know whether it is wholesome for the children. Simple and pure, elevating while entertaining, it is always safe to turn over the Pansy—still in its wrapper—to the eager inspection. The young folks are better and stronger for their association with such a wise friend and companion.

The prospects for the new volume announced many enjoyable features for the coming year. Serials by Pansy and Margaret Sidney, short stories, articles and poems, a profusion of pictures—makes one wonder how so much can be given for so little. The Pansy is unsurpassed for Sunday as well as weekday reading. $1.00 per year, 10 cents a number. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

BALLET.

The October number is here, and as enchanting to the little folks as the preceding numbers have been. With its gay jingles, little stories and pretty pictures, Babyland will quickly captivate the average baby (whether one or six years old). As it is only 50 cents a year, 5 cents a number, every mother will well repay the investment. D. Lothrop Co., Publishers, Boston.

UNDER A FLORAL BELL.

THE METCALF-BOYCE NUPTIALS AT LYNN
A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

A society event of more than ordinary importance was the marriage in St. Stephen's church, Lynn, Tuesday evening, of Edward Roulston Metcalfe of West Newton, son of Mr. Albert Metcalfe, and Miss Helen Maria, daughter of Isaac B. and the late Mary K. Boyce.

A fashionable assemblage filled the church edifice, which was decorated within the chancel rail with smilax, asparagus, cypis scandens and rare plants and foliage. Suspended from the arch forming the entrance to the chancel was a floral bell of white carnations, pinks and roses, beneath which the bridal couple were wedded.

Harry C. Metcalfe was best man. The service was performed by Rev. James H. Van Buren, rector of St. Stephen's.

A boy choir rendered the processional "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden," and at its conclusion the strains of Lorenzini announced the entrance of the bridal party, the ushers preceding Miss Harriet S. Boyce, niece of the bride, and Miss Louise Keene, cousin of the bride. The young misses each carried a basket of bridal roses.

Then followed the bride, leaning upon the arm of her father. She was attired in a gown of white silk trimmed with duchess lace, and wore a tulip veil fastened in her hair with roses and falling from a coronet knot upon a court train. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

At the altar the bride was met by the groom, attended by his best man, and here the impressive ceremony was performed.

The bridal party made its exit down the main aisle, the organ pealing the strains of Mendelssohn's march. The choir rendered as a response, "O Christ, the King of Human Life."

At the conclusion of the ceremony the chimes in the church spire rang out the wedding changes in glad music.

The bridal party were tendered a reception at the home of the bride's brother, W. S. Boyce, 40 Atlantic terrace, where they received congratulations of numerous friends. The house was adorned with flowers and potted plants.

Mr. and Mrs. Metcalfe started late last evening on their wedding journey. They will take up their residence in Chicago. The esteem in which the groom and bride were held was apparent in a magnificent collection of presents, including gold and silver ware and bric-a-brac.

A Distinction.—Miss Pikestaff: "Did you try to kiss me? How dared he?" Miss Pussley (sympathetically): "How could he?" Puck.

Meantime let us make much of the only friend that has defied human aversion, the mellow autumn apple.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

"So Tupper is really engaged to Miss Bond?" "Yes; sudden wasn't it?" "I should say so. Love at first sight, I presume?" "No; not till second sight. You see, the first time he saw her he didn't know she was an heiress."—Detroit Free Press.

It is now claimed that the McKinley medal is made of lead, and therefore poisonous. It has been alleged that the medal was issued to poison the public mind. If it will poison the public body also, its originators builded better than they knew.

Perhaps Mr. Allen will answer this question in his next lecture on the salt industry.

A Pretty Fix.

(Boston Transcript.)

A pretty fix those women's hat-trimmons have got us into! The cases decided against the Government will demand from the treasury nearly $20,000,000. The present cash balance in the treasury is about $44,000,000 of which $17,500,000 is in unavailable fractional coin and $15,000,000 is on deposit in national banks $10,000,000 of matured 4 1/2 per cent. bonds may and probably will be presented for redemption by the 30th. If there had been no tariff, or no women, we should have avoided this dilemma.

A Pretty Fix.

(Boston Herald.)

We suppose none of the readers of the Herald expected us, at this late day, to go into a catalogue of the articles on which the McKinley tariff raises prices. Two of these instances came to our attention in one day last week, however, to which, as specimens of many others, we may perhaps, direct attention. Both were testified to by ladies. The first was in the case of a lady preparing to furnish her house with carpets. She went to one of the best known carpet stores in Boston. "You used to sell me bargains in carpets," said she, "have you any now?" The salesmen smiled. "The day of bargains in carpets is over," said he. "The McKinley tariff finished that." She reported that at home, Her husband subsequently asked what the rise in the price of carpets had been, and was told that it was from 10 to 20 per cent. The other instance was when a lady went to purchase an article of attire at a leading dry goods store of Boston. "We used to warrant these goods to you," said the clerk. "We don't do it now. They are made of inferior quality. The manufacturers do this to get them into our market, and even then we shall have to charge you an advanced price. The McKinley tariff has done this." These two instances, we think, will answer for an hour's observation. It will be borne in mind, as shown in the latter case, that when prices are sometimes kept down the public suffers in the quality being reduced. We have reason to believe that this is often the case in our markets.

—Rev. H. J. Patrick completed 31 years of his ministry last Sunday, and noticed the event in his sermon in the morning and also in the evening service of praise. He preached on the suggestive topic, "How to help a Minister," from the words of Paul to the Romans, "Give Priscilla and Aquila a hearty welcome." He demonstrated from experience that help could be practically given three ways, personally, socially and spiritually. There was nothing of special interest in the report of the past year. Three members of the church have died, all aged, two of them long time nonresident. It was a remarkable record that only one had been taken out of the congregation by death. A gratifying advance of 30 per cent. was reported in the benevolent contributions of the church over the previous year. After the sermon there was a large attended reception at the parsonage on Wednesday evening. Rev. Dr. Strong will speak at the missionary service in the chapel next Sunday evening.

—Mr. C. P. Harkins, Jr., successfully passed the examination and entered the Harvard Medical school on Wednesday.

—Mr. J. C. Fuller has supplied a long felt want in the shape of a Boston directory which may now be consulted at his office.

—The Odd Ladies gave an entertainment and supper in K. of H. hall, Wednesday evening. A very enjoyable program was carried out.

—Mr. Joshua Blake and Miss Mabel Langley were among West Newton guests at the Coolidge-Amory wedding in Brookline, Wednesday.

—Examine the fine line of pipes at Wright's pharmacy. Briars from 15c. to $5.00. Large variety of meerschaums, fancy corn-cobs, etc.

—Newton Lodge #2, I. O. O. F., met in its new quarters in Nickerson's Hall, last evening. The new lodge room is one of prettiness.

—Mr. J. T. Carr of St. Augustine, Fla., has been the recent guest of Mr. Joshua Blake of Cherry street. He is an official in the St. Augustine bank.

—Joe Driscoll, a four-year-old cherub was found crying in the streets of Auburndale, Tuesday afternoon. Officer Quilly endeavored to elicit some information from the sobbing child as to his home, or name but little could be learned from him that his name was Joe. He was taken to West Newton, after some trouble his mother was found to be in Lower Falls and his big sister came and took him home. It is thought he followed a tama and finally wandered to this place.

—A largely attended baby party was held Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. G. W. Brainard, Lexington street. The bairnies were numerous and most of them passed a day of quiet enjoyment while some of them were evidently demonstrating their appreciation of the dinner prepared upon them. The mothers were present attending their babies from accident and from tying themselves with play and enjoyed a social time with a collation provided by their hostess.

—Mrs. Charlotte Maria Chandler, wife of Rev. John E. Chandler, a missionary to Southern India, for the American Board, died Friday last at the Missionary Home on Hancock street. She was a lady nearly 70 years of age and had devoted many years of her life to missionary work in conjunction with her husband. Mrs. Chandler accompanied her husband to Southern India in 1842, when they were connected with the Madura mission. In 1861 Rev. and Mrs. Chandler returned to this country, where they rested for four years, and in 1874 they spent another four years at their home in America. The last return was in 1880 after an actual service of 35 years in the missionary field. Since her return Mrs. Chandler has suffered from ill health, finally terminating fatally. The funeral was held Sunday at 3.30 p.m. at the Missionary Home, a large number of missionary people attending, together with several prominent Wellscley people, including Miss Hale, A. Shafer, president of Wellesley College and members of the college faculty. The officiating clergymen were Rev. N. G. Clarke, D. D., secretary of the American Board, Rev. Calvin Cutler of the Congregational church and Rev. E. E. Strong, editor of the Missionary Herald. A mixed quartet of missionary people attended, singing selections, and the flowers were simple and beautiful. The interment was at Newton Cemetery.

—The new post office fixtures have been put in and the public received their mail from the new boxes for the first time on Wednesday. The remodeling of the post office was commenced two weeks since and there is considerable more yet to be done before the Auburndale public can gain an accurate idea of the vast improvement over the old order of things. The new fixtures are neat and tasteful, the boxes being of a nice brown color, and the surrounding woodwork is of a light tan. A large piece of ground glass is at the left with a large stamp and wicket delivery, in the centre and between the two is a small delivery window. The new fixtures provide nearly 100 new open boxes, and 30 lock boxes have also been added. The boxes run across the room, facing the main entrance and at the right a passage, from which entrance is gained to the postoffice connects the post office with the entrance. Above the boxes set in ash wood-work is a long narrow window affording ventilation. The walls and woodwork inside the new office are finished in terra cotta and the ceiling is tinted a delicate blue. The front lobby walls will be finished in terra cotta with tinted ceiling, and the woodwork will be grained. Curtains of an olive shade will be used and the whole room will be very pleasing. The change after such more or less plain work is most marked.

A large piece of ground glass is at the left with a large stamp and wicket delivery, in the centre and between the two is a small delivery window. The new fixtures provide nearly 100 new open boxes, and 30 lock boxes have also been added. The boxes run across the room, facing the main entrance and at the right a passage, from which entrance is gained to the postoffice connects the post office with the entrance. Above the boxes set in ash wood-work is a long narrow window affording ventilation. The walls and woodwork inside the new office are finished in terra cotta and the ceiling is tinted a delicate blue. The front lobby walls will be finished in terra cotta with tinted ceiling, and the woodwork will be grained. Curtains of an olive shade will be used and the whole room will be very pleasing. The change after such more or less plain work is most marked.

—The new post office fixtures have been put in and the public received their mail from the new boxes for the first time on Wednesday. The remodeling of the post office was commenced two weeks since and there is considerable more yet to be done before the Auburndale public can gain an accurate idea of the vast improvement over the old order of things. The new fixtures are neat and tasteful, the boxes being of a nice brown color, and the surrounding woodwork is of a light tan. ## A CONSOLIDATION.

Doctor Paul Furman sat on the veranda of the Winepaug House, inhaling with fine appreciation the vigorous air smelling of pines and the sea. He had shaken the dust of a busy life from his feet, and had come to Winepaug to obtain a brief freedom from work and thought. For fifteen years Dr. Furman had been very industrious. After making his way through college and the medical school by commendable perseverance and pluck, for his means were small, he began to practice in a Western manufacturing town. First results were not animating, but Furman had foresight and remained in Crichton. His reputation grew with the population, and when finally the town developed into a city and boasted a mayor, Dr. Furman was undoubtedly the leading physician of the place. At thirty-five, he controlled a very good income, and was still unmarried.

Furman had very dogmatic opinions regarding women. The one that should win his heart must be intelligent, cultivated, pleasing and above all womanly. The political theories of the modern advocates of equal rights were an abomination to him.

The woman after Furman's heart was still wrapped in shady leaves of destiny. His profession had engrossed his life. Sometimes at night, sitting on his cheerful but hermit hearth, the thought of a fair cis-a-vis came to him, but more in the shape of a goody air-castle than as an actual possibility.

As he sat upon the piazza, Furman appeared a man certain to gain success of some kind. He was well knit and strong, moved easily and alertly, and his eyes, behind gold-rimmed eye-glasses, were penetrating and resolute; but now they looked about; he was thinking about hiring a boat to troll for blue-fish that afternoon.

The old hotel coach pulled up, on its rather wavering wheels, and Furman negligently watched the passengers vainly trying to alight gracefully from its high step. They were the common sort. A hapless man hemmed in by his bustling wife and numerous offspring, an overgrown boy with a tennis racket strapped to his travelling bag, two spinners in bonnets rich and strange. Last of all, a pleasant sight met Furman's disengaged eyes. A gray haired man with a fine profile assisted an attractive girl out of the rusty vehicle.

"Uncle Prof," exclaimed a delightful voice, "are you sure you haven't forgotten our umbrellas?"

"Behold them, my dear," responded the old gentleman, triumphantly holding up two trim specimens, one of which Furman had cause to remember later. "My brain isn't so full of cobwebs as you seem to think."

Then they went into the office with the others to register their names.

"That's an agreeable voice, the girl's," reflected Furman. "It's well pitched, and has a musical timbre rather unusual."

He hoped the niece and uncle would be given seats at his table. To feast the eyes while gratifying the palate is truly good. When he went in to dinner, however, and saw them seated at the further end of the room, he satisfied his material desires, with consoling philosophy, on roast mutton, although his aesthetic hope was unfulfilled.

Pine trees stood thick about Winepaug House, and meadows spread out beyond, mingled with marsh grass near the sea. Furman sauntered up from the shore on morning, absently musing the harsh caw of a crow flying overhead, as he admired the effect of masses of daises waving in the wind. A gray blouse and wide awake suited him well. His face was glowing and his hair rouged from a seashell, and he was far from looking the keen, rather stern doctor the Crichton folks knew.

In the distance, behind a patch of scrub oak, he saw something that awakened his curiosity. It looked like a black disk fully revolving. Furman walked faster, and discovered that the object was an umbrella. A young woman was wildly shaking at a swarm of insects whirling around her. Furman recognized the girl with the harmonious voice who had arrived a few days before.

She had come out to sketch, and had established herself unawares in the vicinity of a hornets' nest. The firey little creatures probably would not have molested her, had not the fates decreed that she should hang her hat on the branch they had chosen to support their queer gray house. This was an insult that could not be brooked, and an army in yellow and black uniforms immediately surrounded her. She was at the mercy of those subtle weapons, and would have fared badly if Furman had not appeared at the climax of the situation.

"Keep perfectly still!" he shouted.

The exigencies of the moment left no room for surprise, and the girl obeyed at once. The hornets settled in buzzing clusters on her hands and dress, but, luckily, they kept away from her face. Furman hastily scraped a heap of dry leaves together at her feet, and set them smouldering. A swath of smoke twisted into the air, and enveloped the girl in choking clouds. He threw his handkerchief over her face, for she stood a fair chance of smothering and gradually the stung insects dropped off. When Furman gave the word, the girl came forth from her sooty baptism, red-eyed and gasping.

"I didn't expect to be so useful today," remarked Furman, by way of saying something.

The girl wiped her eyes, and gave him a grimy smile, holding out her hands and examining them.

"No, I haven't one sting. It is remarkable. I thank you more than ever."

"You were intrepid; you showed self-control!"

"Self-control? Oh, no! didn't you see the—the umbrella?"

"I saw it," responded Furman, laughing, "but something must be conceded for the consternation of the shock. You rallied grandly."

"Now you have brought back my self-esteem," avowed the girl, pushing back the hair that was blowing about her forehead very becomingly. "But what would you do about my hat? It hangs there like the Babylonian girdles. I would not go near it for kingdomdom, and yet I am rather fond of that hat."

With an eye on the deserted nest, Furman cautiously unhooked what was truly a garden of wild flowers, and gave it to the young lady, who began to collect her scattered chattels. Furman offered to carry her easel, and they walked together to the hotel. The girl told him she was Mary Stanton, and when they reached the hotel steps she paused and said:

"I have thanked you for saving me from the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune; but you must meet my uncle. He will want to thank you, too."

Furman lifted his hat gravely, and watched Miss Stanton critically, with his head on one side, as she went away down the hall. The Don Quixote part he had played rather tickled him.

Professor Stuyvesant held out a hand of friendship to Furman, and the latter was quite ready to grasp it. Indeed, no one could resist the agreeable, ingenuous old man. He was the president of a well known college for young women, and his warning was deep and his culture broad. Furman found his mental atmosphere uncommonly bracing. His niece was an orphan and lived with him, keeping himself and his house in order, he informed Paul.

The acquaintance grew and thrived. Furman thought Miss Stanton was charming. He had admired other women before, in a critical way, but this one touched his inner nature; she was so candid and vigorous and sweet; she talked so cleverly and straightforwardly, while a clear color came and went in her cheeks. If a woman's complexion be a reflection of her soul, surely Mary Stanton had a lovely nature.

Furman had discovered that in addition to possessing Penelope's virtues, she sang well and painted with skill. He had been thinking lately a good deal about his womanly ideal, and wondered if it was something real. He decided that it was, and with characteristic determination resolved to bring it down from the stars, if he could; so he strung his courage up as high as Lady Macbeth counsels, and invoked the help of Fortune.

There was a walk under the pines spread with smooth brown needles; and on a night with a full moon, when the silver light was shining down the slim trunks and lying on the water beyond, it was a fit place for the musings of an Endymion. Furman took Miss Stanton along this path one evening, and when they were a wise distance from the hotel, he began to bring out the wish of his heart. He told Mary of his early struggles and later success, confiding to her his ideas concerning women, and then put his heart and soul at her disposal.

"I have liked you from the first, Miss Stanton. I think you have a true woman's nature, intuitively comprehending its gracious part in life. You have made me forget sundry audacious ladies I have met who were trying to work the miracle of transmigration of souls."

A deep color came into Miss Stanton's face as she listened to Furman's earnest words.

"Are you so sure you know my nature?" she quietly asked.

"I know enough to be certain the rest is wholesome and genuine," replied Furman.

They were standing by a wooden bench, and Mary began to pull off the red and green lichens that encrusted it, covering them in her fingers.

"Yes, I am genuine," she said, reflectively, "and so I will confess that—I like you very much, Doctor Furman," looking at him and smiling rather inscrutably.

"After a while, leaning her head on her hand Mary said, pensively:

"I am glad we can see things from the same point of view. When a woman marries—"

"What then?"

"The ceremony makes twain one flesh, and consequently two identities are merged together. They ought to be harmonious."

"We will consolidate our vote," declared Furman.—Adapted from Woman's Illustrated World.

Without waiting for an answer, Furman turned away and went to his room, profoundly disgusted.

That night Mrs. Freeman Strongmynde's cottage was filled with people from the hotel. The hostess, a suave, ample lady in black satin, with elaborately arranged white hair, introduced the speaker of the evening, and Mary Stanton stood before a table and read the paper. Back in a corner, on the most uncomfortable chair in the room, sat Furman. His arms were tightly crossed and his eyes were sarcastic. He drew in his lips as the young woman advanced from behind a portiere and cast a look over the room before beginning to read. She wore a thin black gown, and there were water-lilies in her belt. Her eyes shone with excitement. They glanced at Furman's grim face, and then fell.

Furman heard the reader's distinct tones, and took in the meaning of the clear and pointed sentences. He looked at the supple figure, the curved lips, the bright hair. His special abhorrence was incarnated in the woman his heart had had.

When the reading had ended, Mrs. Strongmynde and her friends pressed around Mary Stanton and gave her enthusiastic thanks and compliments. Furman went out and walked down the road into the wood, until he came to the place where he had talked to Mary the night before. It was dim and still under the trees. The crickets chirped, and the sea splashed on the sand. Dropping on the bench, Furman threw his arm along the back and fell into meditation. His thoughts were so absorbed that he did not hear the light rustle of petticoats coming along the path, and when Mary Stanton appeared, he leaped up with a start and faced her.

Mary's arms hung at her side, the lilies in her belt had faded, and she looked pale in the uncertain light.

"Has your mind altered?" she asked lightly.

Furman grasped the back of the bench.

"Yes," he answered.

Mary stepped back, lifting her head proudly. "I shouldn't have come here."

"My mind has altered," continued Furman. "I have always shunned and mocked women with advanced ideas, and now one of them has made it very hard for me to live without her. I acknowledge that I have been wrong about woman suffrage."

After a while, leaning her head on her hand Mary said, pensively:

"I am glad we can see things from the same point of view. When a woman marries—"

"What then?"

"The ceremony makes twain one flesh, and consequently two identities are merged together. They ought to be harmonious."

"We will consolidate our vote," declared Furman.—Adapted from Woman's Illustrated World.

The Thing to be Done And How to do it.

To the editor of the Transcript: Looking anxiously for the man who is prepared to grapple in earnest with the questions of State government, I have waited with some curiosity to see what ground would be taken by Colonel Allen at the opening of the campaign.

In his speech at the Massachusetts Club, on Saturday, he said that "it should be the duty of the Republican party to endeavor to strengthen the hands of its executive officers; so to encourage the members of the Legislature that they shall bend to their work with an earnestness of purpose we have not had of late; to give such encouragement to that law-making power that they will feel that their duty is only well done when they have performed the business in such a way as to do away with that lobby which has been a source of so much anxiety to us in years past."

Now this is almost exactly the position which Governor Russell took in his campaign of last year and in his message to the Legislature, and we have this very curious result, that while the Republican and Democratic parties are preparing for a grand battle for supremacy in national affairs, the respective candidates of the two parties agree almost to the letter as to what needs to be done in State affairs. That makes the evidence pretty strong at any rate. I commend the remarks of his candidate to the consideration of Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge.

This being the case, the choice between the candidates should be in favor of that one who goes beyond a mere general statement of the object to be accomplished, and propounds most definitely the ways and means of attaining it.

The things which tie the hands of the governor and make the position that of a ridiculous figure-head are these:

1. That he can make no appointments without the advice and consent of the council, which has no other function or reason of existence than just to hold him in leading strings.

2. That the chief executive officers of the State being elected separately from himself, he has not the slightest control over them or the administration of State affairs.

3. Inasmuch as in consequence of this there is really no executive power, the Legislature has set up a number of perfectly irresponsible commissions which practically govern the State. The governor is a rule a appoint one member of these commissions once in three years, with the advice and consent of the council; but once appointed, he has no control over, or responsibility for, their actions.

To strengthen the Executive, therefore, it is necessary to abolish the council and the commissions, and to give to the governor the full power of appointment and removal of the agents through whom he is to carry on the administration of the State.

To get the Legislature to proceed to business with an earnest purpose, it is necessary to change it from a mob into an organized body with official leaders; to have some business prepared for it when it meets, and instead of a thousand schemes and all struggling to obtain a footing among fifty committees, to have the important business of the State taken up in order under the guidance of the proper officials, it being just as much executive work to conduct the business of a legislature as to manage the almshouses and prisons.

For this purpose, as well as to make any progress in doing away with the power of the lobby, it will be necessary to provide for giving seats in both houses of the Legislature to the executive heads of departments. In other words, the reforms which both candidates agree in demanding can only be reached by a reform in the methods of doing business at the State House.

Let us see which of the candidates has the courage of his opinions, and instead of confining himself to a general statement of what needs to be done, is ready to take the further step of pointing out how to do it. At all events, I never felt prouder of Massachusetts than today, when her candidates are two young men who have the manhood and the conscience to shake off the influence of party managers and to speak for themselves.

One remark of Col. Allen's calls for unqualified praise:

It is a matter of small consequences whether the ambition of one man or another is gratified, but it is a matter of the greatest consequence always that the right sentiment here in Massachusetts be incarnated itself and is recognized. [Long applause.]

There can be no more splendid object of ambition for any man than to go boldly forward and assume the guidance of the sentiment of Massachusetts in the right direction. GAMALIEL BRADFORD, Boston, Sept. 21, 1891.

BE NOT WEARY.

(2ND THESS. 3:13.)

The following hymn was composed and sung at the 31st anniversary service of the settlement of the pastor of the Congregational church, West Newton, Rev. Henry J. Patrick, last Sunday. The words are by Mr. Granville B. Putnam, and the music by J. Eliot Trowbridge. The hymn was rendered by a soprano soloist and double quartet, of the chorus choir of the church, after the anniversary sermon, and was a complete and pleasant surprise to the pastor. The music has been published by the Oliver Ditson Co. of Boston.

Be not weary, Christian watchman, Standing yet on Zion's wall, In the sunlight and the shadow, Heeding well the Heavenly call, Rejoicing in the truth thou proclaimest, While the night winds fiercely blow, Tell us of the bright tomorrow, In the land to which we go.

Be not weary, faithful sower, Tilling in the Master's field, Yours to drop the furrow's seed, His to make the furrows yield, Rejoicing in the truth thou proclaimest, While the night winds fiercely blow, Tell us of the bright tomorrow, In the land to which we go.

Be not weary, faithful sower, Tilling in the Master's field, Yours to drop the furrow's seed, His to make the furrows yield, Rejoicing in the truth thou proclaimest, While the night winds fiercely blow, Tell us of the bright tomorrow, In the land to which we go.

Positive Sale of Splendid House Lots on West Newton Hill.

WILL BE SOLD AT PUBLIC AUCTION

On the Premises on OTIS, ALPINE STREETS AND FOREST AVENUE, ON SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17, AT 3 O'LOCK P. M., Ten (10) very desirable house lots, in sizes from 7,500 to 12,000 feet on easy terms and subject to moderate restrictions; this sale presents a rare opportunity for the seeker of a moderate cost lot in this vicinity, to secure a home in a location in every way desirable and attractive; there is probably no finer neighborhood in all the Newtons than this, and the beautiful homes, magnificent old forest trees and well kept streets, justify the name for this section at least of the "Garden City." There has long been a call for moderate size lots of moderate cost and to meet this demand, Hon. Wm. Clafin had had the tract laid out by Mr. E. S. Semple in lots of a size to meet the popular demand. Come and secure a bargain. Terms: 10 per cent. at sale, 40 per cent. more on delivery of deed, balance on mortgage if desired. Plans to be had of the Auctioneers.

Also at 3:30 P. M., will be sold the substantial 2 story dwelling house on Otis Street, owned by Mr. Clafin. The house contains 10 rooms, hardwood finish on lower floor, has bath room, furnace, gas throughout, cemented cellar, thoroughly plumbed and in every way a desirable house; the lot is ample, containing 28110 feet with a frontage of 130 feet on Otis Street. Terms at Sale. For further facts inquire of the Auctioneers.

—Mrs. Moses King will give a reception at their residence on Belmont street, Monday evening, Oct. 19th, to commemorate their tenth anniversary.

—Mr. Garrison has the foundation laid for his new house on Newtonville avenue, the first to be built on the Syndicate land, and it is to be a very handsome house.

—On some of the streets when the sewer men get through, the gas men have to go to work and relay their pipes, and it is fortunate if the water pipes also do not have to receive attention.

—An entertainment and sale for the benefit of the Indian Library department will be given in Newton Centre, Oct. 28 and 29. Mrs. Erving Winslow will read and other attractions are promised.

—J. Henry Bacon has taken the agency for the Waltham Steam Laundry and will on and after this date call for and deliver all work intrusted to him. Notify by postal card, if you wish your laundry called for.

—At the second Middlesex Prohibition Convention held in Nickerson's Hall Friday, Oct. 12, Rev. Wm. W. Wood of Waltham was nominated for Senator. Wm. H. Partridge was returned to the State Central Committee.

—Donations for the Pomroy Home during the month of September were as follows: Newton, berries, pears, apples; Newton, measuring the depth of the ditch, when one of A. Brackett & Son's coal teams came along and ran over the end of the plank, which projected over the ditch, although there was a foot of clear roadway. Mr. Barrows was thrown from the team and hit his head, striking on his face, and receiving such severe injuries that he had to be carried home. Dr. Seales was called and found that no bones were broken, but some serious internal injuries were sustained besides a number of very painful bruises. One side of his face was filled with gravel, which had to be picked out, and there were other bruises on his arms and legs. He is still confined to his bed, and probably will be for sometime.

—In the fifth session of the Superior Court today, before Judge Bishop, a motion was made by counsel for the Boston & Albany Railroad in four suits brought to recover damages for the grade crossing accident at Newton on Thanksgiving Day, 1889. The suits are brought by Patrick D. Gorman, for himself, and by the administrators of Charles and William Hannan and Joseph Burke, the three latter being instantly killed. The motion was that the plaintiff's suit be dismissed as being in part a particular act of negligence in which they rely. Lawyer Gale, for the plaintiff, said that it was the first time in his life that he had ever heard of such a motion, and that for the Court to grant it would be to compel the plaintiff's to give away their whole case. It would also give the defendant an unfair advantage in enabling counsel to require an election on certain counts, and prevent a recovery. The court reserved its decision.

—The millinery opening this week attracted a large number of ladies to Elmwood street, and the cool weather has caused new bonnets to be bought in greater numbers than ever before. Miss Robbins' taste and skill is becoming so widely known that her millinery openings are always well attended. The display this year is a very attractive one and comprises many novel shapes and designs. The shapes of the bonnets have undergone a radical change, although they are no longer than formerly, and wide ribbon strings are no longer used. The millinery trade is largely used in trimming and there are some very handsome new shades in velvets and ribbons. There were many very beautiful trimmed hats shown, some of them reproductions of imported Paris hats. There were many compliments given by the callers, and a large number were ordered at once, which is the most satisfactory kind of compliment. Miss Robbins has won a large patronage here and her work is considered equal to anything to be found in Boston.

SENATOR GILMAN NOMINATED.

CHOICE OF REPUBLICANS IN THE 2D MIDDLESEX DISTRICT.

The 2d Middlesex Republican senatorial convention was held in Eliot Hall, Wednesday afternoon. It was called to order at 3:30 o'clock by C. Bowditch Coffin of the state central committee. L. E. Bennink of Lexington was chosen chairman, and E. J. Hyde of Newton Highlands secretary.

S. Gleason of Watertown presented the name of the present incumbent, Senator Gorham D. Gilman of Newton, who was unanimously renominated for Senator by acclamation.

The election of a member of the state central committee resulted in the choice of Everett C. Bent of Belmont. The choice of a district committee was disposed of by a motion of Judge Milton, which was carried, providing for a district organization made up of the members of the state central committee and the chairmen of the city and town committees.

After the transaction of the routine business, Mr. Gilman was notified of his renomination and conducted to the hall. He was greeted with hearty cheers as he entered. He spoke briefly, expressing his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him, and pledging himself to do all in his power to further the interests of the district, if reelected.

At the conclusion of Senator Gilman's remarks the convention dissolved, and its members and invited guests were then entertained in the banquet hall, where a collation had been provided by Mr. Gilman. Chairman Burdett of the Republican state central committee and Judge Kennedy of Newton were among the guests.

The Cottage Hospital.

Among the many improvements added to the Cottage Hospital by the new wing, is the number of private rooms, where patients can be cared for by their own physician, and with greater comfort than at their own homes. To residents of boarding houses these private rooms solve a very difficult problem, when attacked by serious illness. The lying-in department of the Hospital is as perfect as can be found in any city, both for private patients who wish to pay and have the services of their own physician, and for the poor who are cared for in the ward. Physicians are very much pleased with the addition, as their patients can have the most skillful care and most convenient and pleasant surroundings.

The private rooms have been patronized, and among the private patients have been representatives of the best class of people in the city, who have been treated by their own physicians and were glad to have a place where they could secure the quiet and good nursing required by invalids, and which before the Hospital was started money could not secure in Newton. There are so many private hotels and boarding houses in the city that a place where well-to-do sick people can be cared for is a necessity.

In another part of this paper an appeal is made for funds for the hospital

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

A LARGE GRIST OF ROUTINE BUSINESS.

The Board of Aldermen met Monday evening, all the members present and Mayor Hubbard in the chair. The minutes of the last two meetings were read and approved.

Edward S. Haynes was appointed hose man of No. 2 Hose, to fill a vacancy.

M. C. Laffin handed in his report of unlicensed dogs, from July 1 to date. He has killed 123, all that could be found that had no owners. He had served 963 notices on owners of dogs, and the report included a bill of $404.25 for service, part of which will be paid by the state.

Papers from the common council were referred in concurrence. The names of four Boston & Albany special police were read, and the recommendation of the Board of Health that water pipes be laid on Florence street without a guarantee was referred to the water board.

The quarterly report of the chief of the fire department was read. There had been 10 calls between July 1 and Oct. 1, the fires causing a loss of $4500 on buildings and $1500 on contents, an unusual record of exemption from fires.

Hearings were announced on the laying of sewers through private lands between Carlton and Emerson streets, on the laying out of Highland street, relocation of Woodward street, and Union street, laying out of Linder Terrace and Fairview street. No one appeared and the hearings were closed.

Alderman Fenn read a remonstrance from Albert Brown, Jr., against the relocation of Woodward street, but it was afterwards stated that he had signed a release.

Geo. M. Peck was granted a detective's license.

Hugh Monaghan and James Morgan applied for licenses as private sewer layers.

John McNamara was granted license to build private stable 30 by 16 feet on Derby street.

Patrick Barry was granted license to move building from Station street to Beecher lane.

C. B. Magee and others asked for police signal box at Waban, and hoped it would be granted, as now the police have to tie men's hands around a telephone pole and hunt for a private telephone, when they want the patrol wagon.

Wm. E. Sheldon asked for the replacement of the gas lamp opposite his residence on Highland street.

Catherine M. Carr gave notice of intention to build house 32 by 42 on Chapel street; Fred A. Leeds, House 27 by 27 on Linder Terrace; Bridget Joyce, house 40 by 30 on Brook street.

Bowers petitioned to have sewer laid on Penbrake street, between Arlington and Duran street, and M. P. Springer for sewer on same street, between Ar-lington and Tremont streets.

J. Morrissey and others asked for crosswalk on Emerson street at junction with Boyd.

D. F. English and others called attention to stagnant water on their land and asked to have the place filled up with ditches and street refuse.

E. T. Wissall and others petitioned to have Cheesecake brook from Eddy street to the Charles river widened and regraded, as it is now not able to carry off the water and is dangerous to health and a nuisance. A hearing was granted for Oct. 26th, at 7:30 p.m.

E. T. Wissall and others asked for one street lamp on Eddy street across the brook.

Royal T. Sawyer and J. G. Kilburn, under the firm name of Sawyer & Co., applied for a 6th class liquor license at Newtonville.

Roger S. Linton and Chas. E. Eves were granted license for rifle gallery at Upper Falls.

Alderman Luke from the finance committee reported the $7500 order for the housekeeper at Nonantum and recommended that it be adopted. The money to be paid by a 4 per cent note due in 1898. The order was tabled on motion of Alderman Hyde, as the location is not yet fixed.

Petitioners for 3 street lamps on Nonantum street, and relocation of electric light at corner of Walnut and Forest streets were given leave to withdraw.

Water mains were ordered 14d as follows:—855 feet of 8 in. on Dedham street, at a cost of $1223; 2128 on same street, cost $2025; 410 feet on Derby street at a cost of $445.

Alderman Hubbard presented an order for an enlargement of the pumping station at a cost of $1200, as the new boilers take up more room than the old ones; the order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Luke the order appropriating $17,000 for the drainage of Magus meadow was rescinded, no work having been done last year. A new order appropriating the same amount was then passed, it being stated that the work of drainage had begun. The money is to be raised by a 4 per cent note, payable in 1897.

On motion of Alderman Fenn $844.72 was transferred from the city treasury, the amount realized by the sale of horses, material etc., belonging to the street department, and added to the appropriation for highway repairs.

An order was also passed that the several unexpended balances from the construction of special drains and culverts be transferred to the construction account of same appropriation.

The highway committee was authorized to reconstruct Lemon brook drain at cost of not to exceed $4000.

On motion of Alderman Fenn petitions for street lights were granted as follows: incandescent light at corner of Boylston and Floral streets, incandescent light at Watertown street near Cheesecake brook; two incandescent lights on Middlesex road; incandescent light on South street on Hammond street at ledge on Grant avenue near Grey cliff road, and at corner of Waltham and Webster streets; street lights on Highland street and Valentine streets.

A concrete sidewalk with edge stones was ordered on Pearl and Emerson streets by estate of D. R. Emerson.

The finance committee were authorized to employ clerical assistance for the examination of the books and vouchers of the City Treasurer for the current year.

L. A. Lowell's application for permit to run private telegraph wires was tabled.

Linder Terrace was accepted as a public highway, after which the board adjourned.

Mrs. Florence (on yachting party): "I am afraid, Mr. Stumps, I would not make much of a sailor." Mr. Stumps: "But you would make an excellent mate.—Harper's Bazaar."

FAREWELL TO NEW ENGLAND.

RECEPTION TO MRS. HARRISON AT WOODLAND PARK HOTEL.

"I have been royally entertained and I cannot express my appreciation of the kindness received during my stay in Newton," said Mrs. Harrison in a charming outburst of enthusiasm last Friday evening.

"While it is always pleasant to return to one's own home, it is likewise sad to say farewell; especially so it is to me when I think that my little grandchildren are to remain behind."

"Yes," said Mrs. McKee, adding her word of gratitude, "mother has so often spoken of the unbounded hospitality she has been privileged to enjoy during our stay in the Newtons."

The affair at which the above remarks were so graciously uttered, and which had again called out the best people of the surrounding district, was the farewell reception at the Woodland Park Hotel, of the wife of the President to her many friends in this vicinity.

In the main drawing room at the right of the main entrance stood Mrs. Harrison in a gown of nickel colored gros grain, slashed with panels of cream, and elaborately trimmed with iridescent jets of corresponding tints. With her was Mrs. McKee in an evening toilet of striped white silk grenadine over silk slip to match. At their left stood Mr. McKee, to whom the guests were conducted by Messrs. H. N. Baker, H. R. Turner, Waldo W. Cole, Charles H. Sprague, C. E. Houghton, J. S. Rust, George Dill and W. S. Hinman, acting as ushers. Mrs. Harrison was escorted to a seat near the front of the hall by Mr. W. W. Cole, and Mrs. McKee's escort was Mr. Henry N. Baker of Auburndale.

Mr. McKee announced the names of the guests to Mrs. Harrison, who, in turn, presented each to her daughter.

About an hour was spent in farewell greetings and happy expectations of meeting again, after which the receiving party were escorted to the dining room, which had been fitted up as a concert hall.

A very pleasing program for stringed instruments had been arranged by the Messrs. Goldstein of the Symphony orchestra, assisted by Miss Mae Shepard of Newton as vocalist, and Mrs. H. E. H. Wright as accompanist.

The opening number, a violin solo by Mr. S. E. Goldstein, was notable for such exquisite harmony as might have been coaxed from the string of a Paganini. Then followed a cello solo of high merit by Mr. A. Goldstein. Miss Shepard sang a triplet of songs, but though rapturously encored, could not be induced to sing again.

Among those present Friday evening were noticed Mr. and Mrs. George W. Fiske, T. W. Gow, H. B. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Pemberton, Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Young and Miss Young, P. Turner and wife, Mr. and Mrs. William Hinman, Mrs. Blake of Cincinnati, T. J. Marble and wife, George L. Thayer and wife, George W. Shepherd and wife, Mr. and Mrs. H. Stearns, Miss C. Augusta Hastings and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hackett, John Priest and family, Rev. and Mrs. Cutler and Miss Carter, C. C. Burr, Capt. Roulette, William E. Plummer and family, Rev. and Miss Bishop, A. B. Noyes and wife, C. P. Darling and family, N. H. Nye, Rev. and Mrs. Dutton, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Kimball, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Fiske, T. W. Gore, Dr. Clarke, Dr. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Barnes, H. G. Hilditch, the Misses Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. U. C. Cosby, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Loring of Newton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Bell of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Paige and ladies, Mr. Albert Wright of West Newton, Walter L. Eckett, Rev. and Mrs. Strong, E. B. Haskell, B. C. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shepard.

Mrs. Harrison departed Saturday morning, having been entertained by the hotel people, and was driven to the Auburndale station with Mrs. McKee. The 10:28 accommodation train was utilized for the trip to Boston.

Dr. Lutz, the Leper Curer.

Sister Rose Gertrude writes to us as follows from Honolulu: "Dr. Lutz, the eminent dermatologist, who has studied the disease of leprosy in Brazil for ten years, has already effected some wonderful improvements in the patients under his care at Kalihi, and the people do not know how to be grateful enough to him for his affectionate care and indefatigable efforts to restore them to health."

"Indeed the government has received numerous petitions to nominate Dr. Lutz as president of the Hawaiian board of health, to give him the charge and control of all the lepers or suspects, and, although these are all tabbed, it is curious to see such demonstrations in a people who, as a rule, are eminently opposed to treatment by foreign doctors. Dr. Lutz is also an enthusiastic bacteriologist, and it may be hoped that ere long a prophylaxis and therapeutics of leprosy may be made known to the world by him which will prove more efficacious than the means hitherto employed by either scientists or soi-disant doctors or leper curers."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Killed by Lightning in an Open Field.

William S. Smith, of Ashleville, was killed by lightning on Prospect Hill, in the north part of West Springfield, some time Saturday afternoon. He left his house early in the afternoon to mend the fence of a pasture about a mile from the house and carried an ax. He also had a dish of salt for a colt in the pasture. As he did not return the family became anxious, and sent to all the neighbors to learn if he had been seen. A party was made up, and the roadside and the fence lines of the pasture were searched, but without success. Another party started out, and the body was found between 8 and 9 o'clock in an open pasture adjoining the Smith lot. A deep wound on the head showed where the bolt of electricity struck him, and passing down his body burned it badly. His hat and one shoe were torn to pieces. There was a small hole several feet deep in the ground at his feet.—Springfield Republican

Hop Raising Is a Gamble.

"Hop raising is the height of gambling in the agricultural line," remarked Mr. J. D. Iler, the well-known brewer. "I have seen hops sell for 8 cents a pound, and I have seen them sell for $1.50 per pound. Some hop raisers have made $2,000 and $3,000 per acre; others have lost about as much. It is about as risky as horse racing, and hop raising hasn't got the elements of fun that can be found in popular sports. This year hops are bringing about 35 cents per pound, and are still going up. Drought, frost and damp weather are some of the causes of the failure of the crops. If some satisfactory way could be invented of keeping hops from year to year the range of prices would not be so great, but until this can be accomplished the growing of hops will continue to make some men poor, others rich."—Kansas City Times.

A Water Run Street Car.

A company of St. Louis men has just been formed for the purpose of manufacturing and introducing a hydraulic street car motor. The pumps with which the hydraulic pressure is exerted are to be operated by electricity, and the hydraulic engines are to be connected directly to the axles of the trucks of the car, thus obviating the heavy gearing that is used in the electric motor.

Two tanks, each containing about one-half barrel of water, will be used on each car. Two points of merit claimed for the invention over the regular electric system are that it dispenses with the use of cog gearing, which wears rapidly and requires frequent renewals, and that the same device can be operated with compressed air by placing receiving tanks for the air under the seats of the car.—New York Journal.

Public Structures in Brussels.

Brussels, not content with having more beautiful public buildings than any other European city save Paris, has now determined to rival Paris itself. King Leopold has just laid the foundation of an arch of triumph one-third larger than the celebrated one in Paris, and it is announced that this gigantic work will be completed by the close of the century. Brussels already has the most monumental court house in Europe—a magnificent pile, which cost vast sums of money, and which contains super-halls. The Paris triumphal arch cost $2,000,000; that of Brussels is to cost $3,000,000. It will be richly ornate with sculptures, some of which will be of gigantic proportions.—Chicago Times.

Tuberculous Animals.

A royal commission has been appointed in England to inquire and report "what is the effect, if any, of food derived from tuberculous animals on human health, and, if prejudicial, what are the circumstances and conditions with regard to the tuberculosis in the animal which produce that effect upon man?" Lord Basing is chairman. The other commissioners are Professor G. T. Brown, Dr. George Buchanan, Mr. Frank Payne and Professor Burdon Sanderson.—New Orleans Picayune.

A Famous Castle in the Market.

Romantic people with money to spare may perhaps be interested to hear that the historic chateau of Hautefort and its surrounding lands, near Pergenex, in old Guienne, are now in the common market. Hautefort was the home of that famous but turbulent troubadour and knight of the Twelfth century Bertrand de Born, who set King John of England against his father Henry II.—Pall Mall Gazette.

This year the French and Italian artillery maneuvers took place near the boundary of the two countries, in Savoy. The officers met and fraternized, but, as neither had leave to depart from his country, they designed a dinner at which the long table stood one-half in Italy, one-half in France, and a red cord which ran across the middle designated the division. They had a jolly time, each in his own country, and a good dinner.

MEMORIES.

A world of fair and golden light,
A soft refrain upon the breeze,
A little bunch of roses white,
And all around sweet melodies,
One summer day

A balmy noon with sunshine fair,
A few swift passing twilight hours,
A love word whispered on the air,
A dreamy silence o'er the flowers,
One summer day

Pale roses dying brightly,
A dead leaf, one bright warm tear.
And dead to all save Memory
Is that which once was passing dear
One summer day

Sunlight glad, O flow'rets gay,
O twitting songsters blithe and free,
Though golden hours shall hold their sway,
You never can give again to me
That summer day
—Louey Jackson in Once a Week.

The Jew as a Farmer.

Among the great masses who must toil for their daily bread, certainly many have not yet devoted themselves to tilling the soil, and on this account their enemies have devised the charge that Jews are of no use in agriculture, that they are averse to all hard work. Here also experience gives a refutation.

In the lands where Jews have been permitted to acquire landed property, where they have found opportunity to devote themselves to agriculture, they have proved themselves excellent farmers. For example, in Hungary they form a very large part of the tillers of the soil, and this fact is acknowledged to such an extent that the high Catholic clergy in Hungary almost exclusively have Jews as tenants on mortmain properties, and almost all large landholders give preference to the Jews on account of their industry, their rectitude and their dexterity. These are facts that cannot be denied, and that have force, so that the anti-Semitic movement, which for a long time flourished in Hungary, must expire.

It will expire because every one sees that so important a factor in the productive activity of the country—especially in agriculture—cannot be spared. My own personal experience, too, has led me to recognize that the Jews have very good ability in agriculture. I have seen personally in the Jewish agricultural colonies of Turkey, and the reports from the expedition that I have sent to the Argentine Republic plainly show the same fact.—Baron de Hirsch in Forum.

Musical Sounds and Noise.

It is a curious fact that musical sounds fly farther and are heard at a greater distance than those which are more loud and noisy. If we go on the outside of a town during a fair, at the distance of a mile we hear the musical instruments, but the din of the multitude, which is so overpowering in the place, can scarcely be heard, the noise dying on the spot.

To those who are conversant with the power of musical instruments the following observation will be understood: The violins made at Cremona about the year 1600 are superior in tone to any of a later date, age seeming to dispossess them of their noisy qualities and leaving nothing but the pure tone. If a modern violin is played by the side of one of those instruments it will appear much the louder of the two, but on receding a hundred paces, when compared with the Cremona, it will scarcely be heard.

The Mexicans, though said to be descended from the Spaniards, have more Indian and negro blood in them than Spanish, and their language is not Spanish, but Mexican. Their complexions are almost negro, but the children are admitted to the public schools as whites, though the school laws compel those of "colored race" to attend separate schools and define colored children as those of "mixed blood," descended from negro ancestry to the third generation inclusive, although one ancestor of each generation may have been a white person." Some writer has said that "there is not enough morality in the whole nation to equal that of one old-time darkey." The statement that they are a dishonest, immoral people made little impression upon me until I saw specific examples of their characteristics. Let me speak of one:

Bernardino is what is called a "roustabout" in certain oil fields. He has married this month the woman with whom he has been living unconcerned by his neighbors for seven years, the mother of his three children. He has celebrated his marriage in a most public manner, with fine clothes (the same only thirty dollars a month) two night dances, a wedding journey, etc. He is proud of it all; but think of the seven years, the three children that Texas laws do not legitimate, and of his neighbors and friends, who have not yet risen to his height—and married!

The costumes of El Paso are as mixed as the population and the morals. Where else would men of unquestioned position in society walk the main streets without coats and vests? Here our principal merchants go to the banks and among the stores in their shirt sleeves. They even sit down to dinner in the best hotels wearing diamonds and opals from the City of Mexico, but no coat. St. Louis has just started a dress reform for men, the approved suit for summer wear to consist of black silk blouse shirt and black knickerbockers. I should be glad to see it adopted here. The national dress of the common people of Mexico has been a loose white shirt and baggy white drawers, but the Government has this year passed an act approving the American suit of clothes. But the men who adopt it cling to the Mexican sombrero adorned with silver braid and embroidery. The women are glad to wear American dresses, but instead of a hat, wear the black or figured ribbons. Two Turkish towels that have not been cut apart were worn as a ribbon on our main street last week, and a piece of red cloth draped sometimes answers the purpose. A ribbon of some kind is indispensable, a woman would no more step outside the door without one than without a dress. They are as fond of bright colors as children. I have seen woman in the most primitive dugouts sewing the gayest calico.

One notable dress was a brilliant green skirt and a waist made of flour sacks. The men's pride of dress centers in the hat, one will spend six or eight or even twenty dollars for his sombrero, when all the rest of his raiment would not bring four bits.

It is a well known fact that paper can be compressed until it will be so hard that a diamond will hardly touch it, but no known mechanism of the present or the past has such power to compress and marke marvels with wood.

Nearly two bushels of uno pearls were dug out of an ancient Indian mound in the Little Miami valley half a dozen years ago. They were all so much decayed, however, as to be of no commercial value.

Robert Boyle, the great philosopher of the Seventeenth century, mentions an English soldier who could eat stones and another who could eat glass.

THE MEXICAN BORDER.*GIMPLSES OF EL PASO AND PASO DEL NORTE.

Light colored houses and a very mixed and incongruous population, these are one's first impressions of El Paso, and being the connecting link between Texas and Mexico, it is one of the most interesting places of a curious country. Since this State was once a part of Mexico, it is natural that Mexicans form a large share of its inhabitants, and Spanish is commonly spoken. Since Chinamen can smuggle themselves over almost any part of a long unprotected border, it follows that Chinese men and women are numerous. Since Texas is partly a Southern and partly a Western State, the other part of the population is far more mixed than in Colorado, for instance, for the settlers in that State come mainly from the Central and Eastern States, while Texas draws largely from the other Gulf States.

The old name of our companion city across the Rio Grande is Paso del Norte, meaning the pass of the north, this part of the river having been used as a pass to the north for centuries. In Juarez, as it is now called in honor of Gen. Juarez, "the George Washington of Mexico," the houses are well furnished with goods of American manufacture, even the poor having chairs, tables and stoves. In the interior of Mexico, however, the complete furniture of a house would be a few vessels of baked clay, a cup or two and a few spoons made of gourds, and one knife—"only this and nothing more." The house itself is only one room with one door and no window, mother earth for floor and for bed and table and chairs and even for stove. In such a house a large family may live and thrive. In the City of Mexico, even, the house is dispensed with by thousands of the poor, who sleep where they can and carry all their property in sacks on their backs.

Many of the children run about naked, and when able to sport clothes, a shirt or a pair of drawers is a full suit. The death rate here in El Paso among the white population is said to be low for a city of 12,000, being only seven in a thousand, while among the Mexicans here it is forty-nine. These figures tell the story of poverty, neglect and dirt. The children are often seen eating green fruit and raw vegetables. The tortillas of corn meal and the beans are the staple food, and are good, but a vast quantity of chile is eaten, made from the hottest of peppers. And when a certain Mexican woman was asked why she did not draw her water nearer her house where it ran clearer, she answered in Spanish, she preferred it "tasty."

Between the two cities is the only international horse car bridge in the world—the horse being a mule. It would be hard to find a town in the "glorious West" that has not the only something in the world. The West, and South, too, must have the superlative degree. El Paso lays claim to another unique distinction. The fare over the bridge being a dime, one may "go abroad" for ten cents.

The Mexicans, though said to be descended from the Spaniards, have more Indian and negro blood in them than Spanish, and their language is not Spanish, but Mexican. Their complexions are almost negro, but the children are admitted to the public schools as whites, though the school laws compel those of "colored race" to attend separate schools and define colored children as those of "mixed blood," descended from negro ancestry to the third generation inclusive, although one ancestor of each generation may have been a white person."

The stories are from the five plays—Macbeth, Hamlet, Othello, Cymbeline, and Julius Caesar, and are told for young readers.

entertained.

—The exclamation of all who see the program of the entertainment and sale to be given at Newton Centre Oct. 14, 15 and 16 is "How good! How attractive!" Not difficult to sell tickets to that entertainment! A new feature of this entertainment and sale will be the singing of a male quartet who have kindly promised their aid to a worthy cause. The Rev. Mr. Peleg Kiplinger announced as having in preparation a serial for the "Century" will not lessen the interest of those who are to hear one of his stories, as Mrs. Erving Winslow will render it at Newton Centre, Oct. 28.

—James Moran of Brighton was arrested on Saturday last by Officer Fletcher for violating the liquor law. It has been his custom to drive a team through stations like Thompsonville and Cary Cross, pedaling various kinds of vegetables. When he came to a house whose housewife declared she could not take in his vegetables in addition to his basket of vegetables a flask of liquor, and in many instances this favorable opportunity to evade the strict no license law of the city was eagerly taken advantage of and it is alleged that Moran was making a handsome little income from his frequent trips to Newton with his vegetables. The case against him came up for trial Monday but it was continued for one week.

—Mrs. Martha Evelyn, daughter of Mr.
Daniel Stone of Chestnut Hill, and Mr.
Frederick W. Clark of Brighton were married Monday evening at the residence of the bride's father, Hammond street. The ceremony occurred at 7 o'clock, the couple standing in an alcove in the parlor, festooned with trailing vines. The background was of wild flowers and autumn foliage, tropical plants and ferns being utilized in the general decoration of the apartment. The maid of honor was Miss Mary A. Hartwell of Waltham, and the best man, Mr. William E. Edes of Waltham.
The bride wore a white corded silk, with garniture of Broton lace, and the customary long tulle veil.
She carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The maid of honor was gowned in a pale blue silk, and carried a bouquet of Catherine Mermet roses. The marriage service was conducted by Rev. Dr. L. Furber, D. D., pastor emeritus of the First Congregational church, assisted by his pastor Rev. Dr.
John J. Holt. After the ceremony, a reception for the family and intimate friends was held. The newly wed couple were the recipients of many valuable presents, among the gifts being a silver water pitcher from the groom's fellow associates of the Chestnut Hill station of the Boston water works. At the close of the reception, the couple departed upon their wedding tour. Upon their return they will reside in Brighton.

—Any one who failed to secure tickets for the musical and literary entertainment given by the Christian Endeavor Society on Monday evening had another opportunity on Tuesday evening, a performance which was offered in this village. Those who braved the storm were more than repaid, and expressions of unequalled approbation prevailed at the close of the concert. The numbers on the program were both varied and attractive, and the audience providing their appreciation by demands an encore after each selection to which the artists most graciously responded.
There rendering a durable program of unusual excellence. The singing of the Appleton and the solo work of Mrs. Young, Miss Whiting and Miss Clarke, justly entitled them to the steadily increasing popularity which ranks them among the first (if not the first) of ladies' quartets. The complete harmony of the voices, the finish of style and execution of the Appleton which will insure their maintaining the high position they have won, through conscientious efforts the past two years. Wulf Fries needs no introduction to lovers of music for his face and work alike are familiar. His sweetness of touch was exquisitely portrayed in the Berceuse by Dunkler while his rendering of the Caprice was strong and powerful and lost none of its original and freshness. The Spanish dance was captivating and inspiring, and with his usual gracefulness he added two charming numbers as encores. Mrs. Ford greatly enhanced the pleasure afforded by Mr. Fries' efforts by her graceful and delicate accompaniments. Mr. Geo. B. Ford strengthened the popularity he won in the late spring, maintaining an assured hold upon his audience. The songs were mostly humorous and the enjoyment of his beaters evinced by continuous laughter bespoke the appreciation he so greatly merited.
Mr. Ford's ability to use any dialect with perfect ease and accuracy, his varied facial expressions and art gestures, entirely freed from exaggeration, are qualifications rarely possessed to such a degree. The "Newtons" fulfilled their promise pledged to give their friends an entertainment worthy of generous patronage. It is to be regretted that confidence in their intentions did not meet with fuller expression.

—At a meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society, held at the Congregational church on Monday evening, the following officers were elected: Pres. Harry L. Hartwell; Vice-Pres. Wm. T. Logan;
Sec. Estelle M. Cobb; Treas. Helen F. May;
Mrs. Charles E. Beckman and Miss Amelie
S. Taylor were chosen delegates to the fifth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society connected with the Congregational church at Waltham.

—The second article met at the Congregational church on Wednesday evening. The work was for a needy home missionary family. Supper was served in the dining room, which with its freshly tinted walls, new gas jets and other appointments seemed like another room. The ladies also expressed great delight in the use of their new kitchen appointments. The entertainment consisted of games and the exhibition of rare books, portraits and other curiosities.

John E. Crowder of Hubbard & Proctor's has successfully passed the examination of the state board of pharmacy and has received his diploma as a registered pharmacist. He was one of 13 who passed in a class of 41.

—Home-made catsup is one of the attractions offered at the Newton City Market, and this week, they began to open stores again, for the season.

—Madison Green church on Sunday night: Processional, "For Thee O Lord, dear Country"; Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis. H. B. Day Boy Solo and Chorus, "O come let us Worship." Retrocessional, "Jerusalem the Golden."

—Mr. Stephen Moore's house is being moved to a new location, and a new street will be opened through his property, which will bring into the market a number of building lots.

—The usual services at the Baptist church will be held next Sunday at 10:45 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Sunday school every Sunday at 12 m. Preaching in the morning by Rev. E. A. Capen of Watertown.

—The Newton Savings bank on the first of October had deposits of $1,990,604.93, and the treasurer, Miss Duncklee, hopes to have them reach two millions, by the time of the fete, on the 1st of January next. The assets of the bank amount to $2,070,474.43.

—Dr. Utley's new house on Centre street is to be a large and handsome one. It is being built by Mr. Henry F. Ross, who has built so many fine residences in the city. The plasterers are now in possession of the house.

—Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Coppins have issued cards for the wedding reception of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Perine Coppins, and Mr. Walter H. Barker, Oct. 2nd, at 7 p.m. at Mr. Coppins' residence on Centre street.

—Postmaster Burbank of Lowell, inspector for the county, and his assistant, Postmaster Fitch of Winchester, visited the Newton post office Tuesday and expressed themselves as much pleased with its location, management and the way the office was fitted up.

—Mayor Hubbard is taking a few days duck shooting on the Cape this week, having foregone his usual vacation in the summer on account of the sewer construction. The sewers are progressing very satisfactorily now, and there is little doubt of their being completed at the time specified.

—Mr. Harry Brooks Day, chorister of Greenwich, and the boy choir, rendered the music at the wedding of Miss Elizabeth A. Rand and Mr. Harry J. Conant, at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Watertown, last evening. A number of Newton people were present.

—The weather the past two evenings seems to have been ordered expressly for the Newton Club Fete, and nearly every one in Newton has taken in the many attractions at the Newton Clubhouse. There are two more evenings left, and the chief attractions of the fete can still be seen.

—The Epworth League of the Methodist church held their annual meeting Monday evening and enjoyed a fine musical and literary program, and a supper. The following officers were elected: Pres., H. S. Leonard; 1st vice, H. Campbell; 2nd vice, H. S. Leonard; 3rd vice, Mrs. Lawrence; 4th, Seymour Eaton; 5th, Chas. Burgher; secy., Rupert Thompson; treas., Mrs. H. S. Leonard. The league is in a very flourishing condition.

—Mr. J. H. Wheelock arrived here from London, Monday night, on the Ameria Victoria, and says it was the roughest passage he has met in his 26 trips across the Atlantic. Many of the cabin passengers suffered severely and several had their arms broken by being thrown about by the lurching of the ship. There were 500 passengers in the steerage, whose suffering was extreme. Mr. Wheelock fortunately suffered no injuries and was not even ill during the voyage.

—Newton is soon to have a parochial school building and a convent. The building is located adjoining the Church of the Lady. The project is in the embryo state, but the details are now being worked out by Rev. Michael Dolan of the Newton parish. Work on the foundation will probably be commenced in the spring. The new building will cost in the vicinity of $50,000. The school building will contain a parlor, a room for 10 children, a refectory, a lot of land adjoining the church, and a garden.

—Mr. Walter H. Baker is building a very attractive house on Maple street.

—Rev. M. Higgins of Lynn will preach at the Methodist church on Sunday morning.

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

THE COMMON COUNCIL DISPOSES OF CURRENT BUSINESS.

The common council met Monday evening, with President Mead in the chair. Other members present were Councilmen Merchant, Jordan, Dutch, Grace, Churchill, Moulton, Forknall, Roffe, Richardson, Weed and Bothfeld.

The business from the common council was disposed of in concurrence. On the hearing on the relocation of Union street, Judge Bishop said that it was supposed there would be no opposition, as it was only to make a short cut to Beacon street, and Mr. Cousins would receive the land of the old road in exchange, the only expense to the city being the construction of the street. He had since heard that Mr. Cousins had some objection, but he was now too ill to be seen, and the nature of his objection was not known. He thought the matter would be amicably arranged, however.

On the order authorizing the hiring of clerical assistance for the finance committee, Mr. Forknall asked if it was usual. President Mead said it was not usual, although it had been done before, when the finance committee wished to have their work finished by the end of the year. The cost would not exceed $50, however.

In regard to Lemon brook, Mr. Bothfeld said the city engineer reported that the present walls must be rebuilt.

Chas. F. Avery and T. W. Weston asked for sidewalk on the corner of California street and Fair Oaks avenue.

Leverett Saltonstall and others asked to have the plank walk restored on Hammond street, as the new walk was unfit for use in winter.

D. R. Emerson and others petitioned for three gas lights on Jewett and Rockland streets.

W. H. Stearns petitioned for concrete walk on Nonantum place.

Geo. S. Downs and others petitioned for crosswalk on Boyd street.

Messrs. Davis, Farquhar and Sheppard remonstrated against laying a sewer on Pembroke street.

On motion of Mr. Roffe $2500 was appropriated for the public property committee for special purposes, viz: $600 for the grading and approach to new Waban school house; $1100 for partitions at High school building; $250 for improvements at Armory Hall; $550 for unpaid bills.

On motion of Mr. Bothfeld $1400 was transferred from the appropriation for Arlington street, and added to the Woodland avenue appropriation. He said that only $1200 was needed of the $2000 appropriated for Arlington street, and of the money thus saved some should be used to make certain needed improvements on Woodland avenue.

Mr. Forknall presented another order appropriating $7500 for the new house at Nonantum, but it was tabled to await the action of the aldermen on a similar order. Mr. Forknall said that the objections to the site recommended by the public property committee had been withdrawn.

The common council then adjourned.

THE EL PASO SMELTER.

THE ASSAYING AND SMELTING OF ORE.—ONE STEP IN MAKING A CARTWHEEL DOLLAR.

It seems to me that Harper's Magazine in its series of "Great American Industries," should have had an article entitled "A Silver Dollar," with illustrations of a smelter with its furnaces, and its men at work. All of us use silver money, and since the McKinley bill, have read more or less about the high tariff on low grade lead ores and kindred subjects—perhaps even of the erection of five great smelters in Mexico, to smelt the ores there instead of in this country. Few know how many times a piece of ore is handled between the mine and the mint.

To begin with, the ore as it reaches the smelter is unloaded into great bins and sometimes a "grab sample" for assaying is taken. The shoveling is done at the smelter where this letter is written, by Mexican labor, and costs about a dollar a day. The sampling begins even while the car is unloading, for of every five shovelfuls, four are taken to the large bins for storage, and one is taken to the sampling and crushing department.

There it is fed to a crusher and broken into pieces about the size of English walnuts. This is divided in halves and one half is put through the rolls, coming out much finer than before, half of this being now the sample.

And this process of reducing in coarseness and quantity goes on, the workman taking pains to mix it all properly and to have an honest proportion of the coarser and finer parts of the ore in each division. Indeed, so afraid are the miners of being cheated in this process that an agent in their employ is usually present to see that the sampling is honestly done, as the mineral is always sure to be richer than it is found to be, and that the smelter is anxious to cheat him all it can. The sampling event is to be repeated to satisfy some owners.

This sample is finally reduced to two small packages of pulverized ore of most unpromising aspect. It may be black as coal or yellow or red as clay, but it never looks as if there were precious metal in it. Both packages are sealed, and one is taken by the agent of the mine offering the ore for sale, to be given to any assayer he chooses for independent figures. The other is given to the smelter assayer, and on the figures he sends back in due time depends almost everything connected with the business. He weighs on delicate scales a small part of the small amount sent him, and with it goes through the process of smelting in miniature, adding a flux to unite with the worthless part of the ore and roasting the mixture in little dishes of fire clay, either scrollers or crucibles, in his own little furnace. The first process gives him all the good parts of the ore in a "button," the worthless part and flux having united and formed a glassy substance which is brittle and easily broken away from the button. He cooks this again at a bright cherry heat, which drives off the lead in fumes, and then has a button so small it must be handled with pincers. This he weighs on still more delicate scales.

The assayer then puts this button in a test tube with nitric acid, and the silver being dissolved and washed away, he now has the pure gold contained in the teaspoonful he began work upon. One may easily see that there is little gold in so small a quantity of ore. He washes it carefully out of the test tube into a tiny porcelain capsule and dries it over flame. The gold is now weighed with great care, and from this series of tests are deduced the figures he writes on his certificates, stating that the ore sample submitted to him contained so many ounces of gold and silver and such a per cent. lead to the ton. From these figures, since the sample is the exact average of the carload of ore, the smelter estimates the value of the lot, and pays for it at once, not paying for the gold, silver, lead, etc., that it actually gets out of the ore, but for the amount of cash that the assayer says from his short process of an hour or two must be in it.

From his figures the metallurgist also, knowing just what this ore contains, knows just what lime, silica, iron, etc., form the proper flux for treating the ore in the furnaces, and for getting out all the good things the assayer put in his certificate. The chemist also makes his estimate from the same sample, using chemical processes in his laboratory to find the proportion of copper, silica, iron, lime, etc., and his figures are used by the metallurgist. When the metallurgist knows just what the ore contains he writes the order for the furnace foreman, for instance, to charge the furnace with so many pounds of high grade ore, so many of low grade ore and so many of lime, iron and silica for flux. The fire itself is made of coke and charcoal, about one seventh of a charge being fuel.

The amount of each thing to be put into the furnace is now weighed in hand cars which are put on an elevator and carried to the floor above, where the furnace is fed, though all smelting products are drawn off below. The El Paso smelter has seven furnaces about twenty-eight feet high. The contents of the hand cars are shoveled into what seems to be a smoky, dusty hole in the floor, but this is really the top of the furnace. As the ore and flux become reduced by the action of heat and gases, the lead is first separated from the rest, and having great affinity for silver and gold, it falls down like fine rain, bringing the precious metals with it. About every five minutes the slag is drawn off at the bottom, the tap hole being opened and the slag bubbling and pouring out a white heat. It falls into slag pots holding about two hundred pounds, which are on wheels and are drawn out by men known as "pot pullers," who do only this work.

The pot is drawn just outside the building and allowed to stand till a black crust forms on the top, so that it can be safely pulled further away to the dump. There it stands till the slag is solidified and can be turned out in large cakes. There is some copper left at the bottom of this mass which is broken off and sent away to a copper smelter for refining. But all the rest is worthless and is broken up by the Mexican workman, and, resorting only a sample for the assayer, is thrown on the dump. From this sample the company learns whether the process has left any silver and gold in the waste product. The dump grows to be a huge black monument of the work done by the smelter.

The tap hole, which has been closed by a lump of wet clay, is on the front of the furnace. There is another tap hole on one side that is opened less often than the first, and from this comes what is called "lead bullion." It is mostly lead, but the silver and gold are with the lead. This falls into a huge kettle under which is a fire to keep it liquid, and is dipped out like water into moulds which hold about eighty pounds. These moulds have letters covering one face, "El Paso Co." They are 22 by 4 by 3 inches, as eighty pounds of lead makes a long slender brick, called a "pig."

A little sample is cut out of these pigs for the assayer, and two carloads a day are shipped away to the refinery. For smelting is but one process on the way from mine to mint. There is further separation and refining to take place before the valuable metals can be sold to the mint, and the United States has still further work to do upon them before they become dollars and dimes.

The work of the smelter, except that of the army of bakers, goes on night as well as day, and Sundays and holidays too. There is the noise all night of the engines which make the draft for the furnaces, of the pump that feeds the "water jackets," there are electric lights all over the "smoke ranch," as well as the light from the fires themselves.

The great smoke stacks vomit forth sulphur, arsenic, lead fumes, etc., and since even the smoke carries away silver with it, it is conducted through long chambers, from which the soot is periodically cleaned out, made into bricks and fed again to the furnace.

Lead poisoning is the great dread of the smelter workmen, both white and Mexican, especially of those who stand by the pots as they are filled, and inhale the lead fumes. But even those who empty the cars of dry ore, and those who shovel it in the sample room, keep the lead dust out of the noses and mouths with a wet sponge or handkerchief. Some men can work on a furnace years before succumbing to lead poison, but others break down in a few months. Colic is the most painful symptom, but there is the most danger from paralysis. Milk is the medicine used. Every one knows how quick milk is to absorb anything evil, or any odors, in the air around it. It acts in somewhat the same way in the body, taking up the lead poison from the system. But a man once seriously affected by lead bears some symptoms of the disease with him always, even if he chooses some other employment. If he returns to his own work, as he is most likely to do, he is more quickly poisoned again. One foreman has only partial use of his hands from paralysis, but he is still forever.

The El Paso Smelter is only a branch of the great Kansas City company, but it has a pay roll of $13,000 a month, and shipped last year to the refinery 11,300,000 pounds of "lead bullion." PARK.

Improvements at Oak Square.
One hundred acres of land is to be put on the market soon. The land belongs to J. J. Grace, the owner of the Columbia Theatre, and is situated in the vicinity of Oak Square, Brighton. A part of the land lies on Brighton Hill, north of Washington street and not far from the Newton line, while another tract is situated between Tremont and Nonantum streets and borders Oak Square. A third tract is at the corner of Washington and Nonantum streets. Plans for a new street across the marsh to the Faunce station are under consideration, and the whole territory will soon be opened up for building purposes. McLaughlin and Convery are handling the property. This is a section of the city where building operations have been quite slow. Anyone riding on the Oak Square line of electric cars is impressed with the large amount of undeveloped land along the route. Beautiful fields and orchards give a somewhat rural appearance to the locality, but it is probable that this will not last long, for the real estate speculator has his eye on these tracts.

To avoid a cold and lameness from wetting, rub the chest with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

ARTHUR LYMAN POINTS OUT MISTS ARE IN MR. GUILD'S REASING.

To the Editor of the Herald:—The quotations on Levell extra suers, stated by Mr. Curtis Guild, Jr., for 1890, 1890 before the McKinley bill; and 1891 after the McKinley bill are correct, but as I have said to him, I consider his article on carpet prices in the Commercial Bulletin of Oct. 3 as written under misapprehension and as practically misleading. It does not, I think, cover the whole case, and it does not touch the essential points.

It is hardly worth while to say that carpets in 1890 were higher than they are now. The fall in prices of all sorts of goods, carpets, iron, cotton cloth, etc., etc., has been wonderful in the past 20 or 30 years. But the fall has come from increased production per loom or spindle or furnace, from vastly improved machines and methods, from the extension of railways and the enormous reduction in cost of transportation, etc., and not from protective tariffs.

This fall in prices has been marked in free trade England as in the United States, and wages have meantime gone up here and in England. As to carpets—the McKinley bill increased heavily the duties on carpet wools, and it has excluded some kinds, with the queer result of giving foreigners exclusive use of them at 3 or 4 cents per pound less price than before. It is perfectly certain that if the McKinley bill had not passed in October, 1890, the prices of carpets would not have advanced; it is equally certain that the prices did advance at wholesale. Those who had wool on hand got the benefit of this partial and temporary monopoly, that has about passed away, and the permanent bad effects are beginning to tell; as it was evident they would.

Retail prices were, I think, really advanced in Boston to some extent, but if not, they would have been advanced sooner or later if it had not been for the unsatisfactory condition of trade, unless the retail dealers had remained content to take the advance which they were really paying to the manufacturer out of their own pockets.

In New York, Chicago and Philadelphia I understand that the retail prices of carpets were advanced.

That the McKinley bill increased the cost of carpets; that the price of carpets were advanced in consequence of the McKinley bill; that they would not have been advanced if the McKinley bill had not passed; and that if wool had been made free thus costs and prices of carpets would have gone down, are facts that cannot be disputed by any one who understands the carpet manufacture and trade and its conditions in 1890 and 1891.

But what is the meaning of this rejoicing determination on the part of the Republican protectionists to prove that the prices of all the goods made in Massachusetts have fallen since the passage of this blessed McKinley bill? Is that what the manufacturers urged Congress to advance the duties for? Does a so-called protected manufacturer want to have the prices of his goods put down? Is it of any advantage to an operative in a factory in Massachusetts that the price of the goods he makes are lower? Does he not know that his wages are paid out of the money received for the goods and that if the money received is less his wages must before long be reduced, too?

The reduction that has come in the price of cotton cloth in the course of 20 years, because a spindle or a loom runs twice as fast as it did, has come, not only without harm to the spinner or weaver, but with a real advance in wages, because the spinners and weavers have gained in power and opportunity by the use of wonderfully improved machines. The man who uses the improved power machines in making shoes can make more money than the man who worked by hand in the little shoe shop by the sea in winter, and spent his summer days in fishing. In the matter of prices and wages this is beneficial to both operative and consumer, but this is very different from a fall in prices brought about by disasters in business, poverty of would-be consumers and restrictions on trade and exclusion of important raw materials.

In the autumn of 1890 there of the European investments in the Argentine Republic showed itself in the failure of Baring Bros. and the poor corn and wheat crops in this country left the farmers in no condition to buy freely of manufactured goods, and the immense cotton crop, combined with dull trade, reduced greatly the prices of cotton cloth.

A Lowell Republican paper has made some quotations from the letter I recently sent to the Herald regarding the advance in wages in manufacturing during the past ten years, but has unfairly put over it a line implying that I attributed this advance in wages to the tariff. As I have said, the advance in wages during this period has been general the world over, and from causes I have stated above, and quite without connection with tariff or free trade.

The countries of free trade basis have the advantages, at least, of working under natural conditions, and are not also subject to the embarrassments and restrictions caused by complicated tariff laws, with high duties on raw materials, and are free from the blessings of a McKinley bill, whose chief merit in the view of the Republican managers in Massachusetts, seems to be that it has reduced the prices of all the goods made by Massachusetts working people, and consequently the fund from which their wages come.

ARTHUR T. LYMAN.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

Which are the tin-plate liars? is the absorbing question in national politics. The advocates and the opponents of the tariff laws agree in calling each other by that name, but peculiarly offensive term. A council of some of the latter faction was held in New York the other day. It was composed of representatives of business firms which are among the heaviest consumers of tin in the country, who formed an association to be known as the Tin Plate Consumers' Association of the United States. After listening to a statement of the objects one of those present characterized the organization as "something designed to choke off all tin-plate liars in the United States." Officers were chosen as follows: President, Henry W. Lamb, Boston; secretary, Robert Ganz of the National Provisioner; vice presidents, D. Willis James Jr., and H. B. Haigh; treasurer, Charles S. French, Hon. T. S. Bunting, congressman-elect, and high in office in two packers' associations, delivered an address prepared from the standpoint of the consumer. He avowed that

The canning industry consumes more than one half of the tin-plate imported, and this pays $8,000,000 yearly.

The industry costs nearly two thousand establishments and gives employment, directly or indirectly, to nearly two million people. All the promises of concern which were to embark in the tin plate business within thirty days from the passage of the act have proved myths. Instead of depressing the price of tin plate, as Mr. McKinley predicted, the act made it possible for speculators to anticipate the advance by making sales in nine months to such an extent that consumers paid an advance on tin plate almost equal to the increase in duty. Figures show that the increased cost to consumers of canned goods, by the duty on tin is enough to pay twelve thousand workmen $400 a year with $200,000 left over. It would require sixty thousand acres of land to grow the corn represented by this waste. In the absence of duty the canner could pay the farmer twenty-five per cent more for the products canned and still sell them for the old prices. The meat packers used six hundred thousand boxes of tin plate in the year ending March 1, last. Of this 475,000 boxes were used at home. The duty which the consumers paid was $1,225,750, or enough to pay for 56,287 more head of cattle, which would have paid the farmer $20 a head, and would have required for grazing over one million acres.

In the Eliot Congregational church, Kenilworth street, Roxbury, Wednesday evening, Oct. 18, Louise Rogers, daughter of Mr. Austin Rogers, was married to Mr. John W. Byers of Newtonville. The chancel was tastefully decorated with choice flowers for the event, which was witnessed by a large number of friends and relatives of the bride and groom. Miss Mary Byers of Newtonville was maid of honor, and Mr. Frank V. Rogers served as best man. Master Burton Hamilton and little Dorothy Davis served as pages. At the chancel the bride was given away by her father, and the matrimony knot was tied by Rev. F. A. Manning, pastor of the church. Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's residence, 133 Roxbury street. The parlors and stairway were decorated with cut flowers, silk and tall palms. A number of beautiful presents were contributed by friends. Thursday morning Mr. and Mrs. Byers started on an extended wedding trip.

The summer home of the Unity Art Club is closed for the season, though its attractions of genial home atmosphere and its beautiful surroundings made the late comers loth to go. Socially it has scored a great success, and its members are not afraid of a few evenings in social fellowship. Among the Newton friends and members who were there were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Mandell, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin R. Bailey, Mrs. M. A. Moore, Miss Allen Macomber, The Misses Thompson of Otis street, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Boyden, Miss Emma Sibley, Mrs. Sawtelle, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd, Miss Jeannette A. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Cole, and many others known in art literature and music might be added to this home list of quiet workers. A large number of aquerres and some oil paintings were results of the summer's work and an exhibition will be held at the club rooms early next week.

The Central Congregational church was the scene of a wedding last evening. The contracting parties were Miss Mary Louise, daughter of Mrs. William A. Lucas of this place and Mr. Thomas Leonard Crawford of New York City. The bridal party entered the church at 8 o'clock, the bride leaning upon the arm of her brother, Mr. George W. Lucas, son of Lucas, minister of the bride, and the best man, Mr. Harry C. Lucas, the bride's brother. The maid of honor was Miss Alice L. Lucas, sister of the bride, and the ushers were Messrs. Charles B. Lowell, Harry V. Jones and Arthur W. Voss of Newtonville, and Frank F. Streeter of Roxbury. The bride was charmingly gowned in crepe de chine over white silk and chiffon. Her only ornament a pearl chain necklace. She was accompanied by her mother upon the occasion of her marriage. The maid of honor wore a heliotrope silk costume and carried a bouquet of white roses. The church was decorated for the occasion with autumn foliage, potted plants and ferns being used in the chancel. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. A. H. Quint of Allston. After the ceremony, the bride and her family were entertained at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Clegg on Craft street. The newly wedded couple received many congratulations, and were the recipients of many valuable presents, which were displayed in one of the upper rooms. At the close of the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford departed on their wedding tour. They will reside in East Orange, N. J.

CITY POLITICS.

There is not much advantage in talking about city politics until the state election is out of the way, but the question is of such importance locally that it will crop out occasionally. The local correspondent of the Boston Herald had an interesting article this week on some of the changes that will be made in the city council and about the mayoralty issue, and the retirement of certain of the aldermen will be much regretted, as the present board is one of the best the city has had.

In regard to the mayor it seems more than possible that Newton will see the remarkable sight of all parties uniting on the same candidate for mayor this fall. Mayor Hibbard's reelection is advocated on all sides, and he will probably have to accept a renomination, whether he wishes it or not. The great demand on his time made by the duties of the office may make him reluctant to accept, but the reforms he has inaugurated are of such importance, and the sewerage business now well under way, make it an imperative duty for him to accept another term and see the thing through.

Major Hibbard has given such satisfaction during his first term that it is felt that he well deserves the honor of a unanimous reelection. The experiment of having a thorough practical businessman for mayor has proved an unqualified success. Take the meetings of the city council, for a sample. The board of aldermen has for years set 7.15 p.m. as the hour for meeting, but under former administrations it was very rarely that a meeting was called on time. This year, however, not one meeting has failed to be called at the moment appointed, and the work of the board is dispatched and the session ended as promptly as it began. This is a fair sample of Major Hibbard's administration. If anything needs to be done, it is attended to promptly, any complaints made to the mayor are looked into at once, and, if necessary, matters that do not work satisfactorily are straightened out.

Another thing is the absence of any acts, or anything that looks like bidding for the popular vote, on the part of the administration. The work done is open to all to inspect, and the people are left to form their own impressions. The door of the mayor's office at City Hall is never closed, and every attendant at the meetings of the board has free access to it, when the mayor is there, although he is rarely out of the council chamber. The whole atmosphere of the administration is one of business, simplicity, and politeness are apparently never thought of, at least by the mayor and aldermen, in all their dealings with city affairs.

We have a good deal of curiosity to see the result of such a course. We are so often told, before election, that public office is a public trust, that a good official will do his duty regardless of consequences, and so on, that it will be interesting to discover the effect of practical carrying out of such reform principles. The people of Newton are more than usually intelligent, devoted to reform of all kinds, and if such a policy will win approval anywhere, it will in Newton.

As far as can be judged from expressions of citizens in all parts of the city, this practical, business-like policy has won approval and endorsement from those who were on the other side last fall, and if it should result in a unanimous renomination and reelection of the man who has brought all this about, what a lesson it would be to politicians and others ambitious of office. It would show that good, honest work, a straightforward course in carrying out the duties of an office, a careful regard to all the interests intrusted to an official, and an utter disregard of any of the usual methods of making oneself "solid with the voters," is at the same time the surest and the most honorable means of winning popularity. Every good citizen is interested in such an issue as this, and fortunately there is not much doubt of the result. Honesty, to use the word in its widest sense, is and should be the most potent element of strength a candidate can possess.

There have been some rumors of opposition to Mayor Hibbard among the laboring men, because of the crushed stone contract, and other measures by which the city has saved money, but these rumors have but little foundation, as far as we can discover. The great majority of laboring men like a straightforward man to deal with, on whose word they can place confidence, and who treats all exactly alike, without fear or favor. This they have found to be the case with Mayor Hibbard, he has no political friends to reward or foes to punish, and every man is sure of fair treatment. The laboring men see this, and it will be hard work to find many who are not satisfied with the present administration, outside of a mere handful, who are never satisfied with anything.

THE Watertown and Belmont Representative district, the 16th Middlesex, has re-nominated J. Henry Fletcher of Belmont, the representative in 1890. There was quite hot fight in the convention caused by a speech of Mr. Jesse Wheeler, who said he had voted against the Democratic nominee, Mr. Ensign, last year, and as that gentleman had represented the town faithfully, he would like to see the way to return Mr. Ensign to office. As a reason for making the motion, Mr. Wheeler said the present incumbent lives on the South side, which each year is in danger of being annexed to the city of Newton. He did not wish the convention to nominate Mr. Ensign, but he wished the convention would adjourn without making a nomination, and thus leave the Republicans to vote for Mr. Ensign, or not vote at all.

THE BOSTON TRANSCRIPT'S real estate man says that a charter has been granted to "The Newton and Waltham Electric car line" to extend its tracks from Newtonville to Newton Centre, and that work will probably soon begin and the value of property between the two villages will be greatly enhanced. This is interesting, but unfortunately it is not the Waltham & Newton electric car line that has the charter, but the Garden City Company, and the company is said to be in doubt whether it is legally organized, so that work will not begin for some time, possibly not until the company is reorganized and a new charter obtained. Such a road would be of great value to the city, although it ought to take in Newton Highlands, if it is to be a paying institution.

In another column will be found an appeal from Miss Francis C. Sparhawk, for the Indian Library department, of which she is the head. A two days fair is to be held at Newton Centre, to raise money to carry on this excellent work among the Indians, and Miss Sparhawk has generously given her time and strength to the work. Her letter gives some details of the benefit derived from the papers, and magazines sent to the Indian children, and they are proving a valuable help to making good citizens of these wards of the nation.

COL. CARPENTER of Brookline will not represent that town this year in the legislature, although he was one of the best representatives in this year's legislature. It is said that Mr. Carpenter was crowded out, as he was too independent to suit some of his constituents. Impartial judges would say that Brookline was only too lucky when it could secure a man of Col. Carpenter's character to represent it, and that a failure to appreciate him was a great mistake.

ONE of the features of this remarkable campaign is Speaker Barrett's great victory at the Melrose caucus, which means also his re-election as speaker. Mr. Wardwell evidently thinks so, too, for he has declined a re-election. There has been a determined effort to down Mr. Barrett, because his ambitions interfere with those of other prominent Republicans, and for this reason the affair has attracted a good deal of attention. Mr. Barrett can certainly be congratulated on his victory.

CHAIRMAN W. H. PARTRIDGE, of the Prohibition State Committee, is the last man to issue a challenge to Mr. Lodge of Nahant, and Mr. Partridge wants him to meet some prohibition orator in joint debate. Mr. Lodge has not yet replied but it does not need a prophet to predict that the joint debate will not come off. In the first place Mr. Lodge has his hands full for the rest of the campaign.

A WRITER on Greater Boston, in its public parks, in the Boston Globe says with truth "Wealthy Newton is not doing as well as from the character of the residents the city might be expected to do. This in part is explained by the town still being encircled by trees and fields. But how long will this be so? Only a few years more, in all probability."

MR. JOSEPH R. SMITH has been nominated by the Democrats as their candidate for representative. Only one candidate was nominated.

J. L. SANDERSON of Waltham was nominated by the Democratic Senatorial convention which met in Armory Hall, Wednesday afternoon.

It is announced that the Boston Journal is to publish a Sunday edition, but orthodox Journal readers say the rumor is incredible.

The Danger from Cold Drinks.

"In my opinion," said a physician, "it is not so great a mistake to indulge in cold drinks in warm weather as it is to drink them rapidly. On a hot day it is almost inevitable that people should drink, and what the system seems to crave is something cold. If that something could be a little less than ice cold it would be so much the better. But it is practically out of the question to get a drink of a temperature of 40 or 42 degs., 15, which is about as cold as is necessary in order to meet the demands of nature.

"So, then, ice cold drinks are likely to remain a permanency, and thousands and thousands of people will continue to drink them. Now, what I should advise is that they perform the operation with some deliberation. The man who swallows a glass of soda water or anything else at a temperature of 32 or thereabout does a dangerous thing. The danger is in suddenly chilling the nerves of the stomach, and the result may be sudden paralysis. There is neither sense nor reason in drinking thus rapidly.

"I do not mean, on the other hand, that it is necessary to wait until the drink, whatever it is, has grown warm. What I plead for is that people should take fifteen or twenty seconds, or even half a minute, in swallowing a glass of soda or beer or whatever they use to satisfy their thirst. Everybody can afford that much time—even the most hurried man—and the result cannot fail to be decidedly advantageous in the long run."

—New York Tribune.

Fought with Jackson at New Orleans.
Jose Cardova, who was 108 years old, is dead. The cause of his death was old age. He has been working as a laborer up to two years ago, when he quit, incapacitated.

Jose Cardova was born in New Orleans, and was twenty-seven years old and serving in Old Hickory's army when the latter beat the British out of that city. Before he left New Orleans he had acquired the English and French languages in addition to the language of his father, and after he moved to Nacogdoches, Tex., he was such a well informed man that it did not take him long, in the rude Mexican conditions prevailing there, to build up a competence.

The fortune went, though by some process not clearly recorded, and in 1836 he moved to San Antonio, where he has since lived. He leaves a wife, aged ninety-eight years.—San Antonio Express.

Railway Car Heating by Electricity.
It is reassuring to know that the "deadly car stove," which has played such a ghastly part in hundreds of tragedies, will soon be seen no more. An admirable system of electric heating for cars has been invented, which is so cheap and easily operated that its universal adoption is simply a matter of time. The railway company on whose road this system has been tested by a course of practical work speaks of it in the highest terms, and the traveling public is not less gratified at the comfort and safety which is now assured. After the sad experience of the dirty and gaseous condition of the average coal heated car, the absolute cleanliness and absence of odors, together with the even temperature of a car electrically heated, is a revolution in modern car heating.—New York Telegram.

An Oddity in Painting.
The provincial cities of France are just now being entertained by a remarkable artist, one who displays wonderful skill in her own peculiar style of painting. With plates of various colored sand before her, she takes the sand in her right hand and causes it to fall in beautiful designs upon a table. A bunch of grapes is deftly pictured with violet sand, a leaf with green sand and relief and shadows with sand of the colors to suit. When this has been admired by those artistically inclined, it is brushed away and is soon replaced by a bouquet of roses or some other object, all done with great dexterity and delicacy. Even the finest lines are drawn with streams of sand, all as distinct as though drawn with an artist's brush.—St. Louis Republic.

A Big Yield.

C. H. Bullock, of Northfield, Minn., has obtained 1,120 bushels of potatoes from one acre of land. This is said to be by far the largest yield ever known, 300 bushels being usually considered a big crop. That the 1,120 bushels were all raised on one acre of ground is sworn to by a number of trustworthy people of the vicinity. Mr. Bullock will net $330 for his product, nearly all clear gain. Last year he would have made $600 of the same yield, as the price of potatoes was high then. The farmers in the vicinity are considering these figures and thinking of potatoes a good deal.—New York Sun.

Playing War.

It seems there was one incident of the recent attack on Fisher's Island not down on the bill. It had been arranged that the invading force should in due season capture the island, and directions had been given accordingly, but no one had thought to mention the fact to the great bull that lords it over the pasture where the struggle occurred. When he saw that there was danger of losing the island he lowered his horns and raised his tail and charged upon the combatants, routing the hospital corps and threatening to clean out the whole army.—Hartford Courant.

A cow near Thompson, Ga., that got her tail caught somehow in a tree, made trouble worse by going around the trunk until she wound up like a clock. She then became frightened, and giving a lunge pulled the tail out by the roots. Afterward the tail was found as described by the animal's owner.

A Cincinnati rat, desiring comfortable quarters, utterly regardless of expense, fashioned its nest out of $32 worth of greenbacks which it found in a drawer. The owner of the greenbacks has confiscated the nest, and shows it to her visitors.

NEWTON CLUB FEAT.

paper, was located in the east end of the big tent, and the ladies in charge were Mrs. E. C. Bridgman and Mrs. A. Q. Cole.

The dining tables were arranged on the platform, veranda, and refreshments, including a table d'hôte dinner, were served in the dining room within by Steventon Trenthard.

The most unique exhibit of the fete was that of Messrs. J. N. Keller and W. W. Jacques, consisting of ancient and modern electric inventions, including the telephone exhibited at the Centennial in 1876; the telephone receiver, made by Prof. Bell in 1874; the Gray telephone connected independently and contemporaneously with the Bell telephone; Edison's first commercial phonograph; apparatus used in the first electric telegraph in 1842; Reiss' musical telephone, made in 1861; Benjamin Franklin's electrical machine, modern telegraph apparatus and other features.

With the exception of the electrical exhibit, 200 long distance telephones were connected with Boston and New York. By means of a transmitter in the Tremont Theatre the visitors were enabled to listen to the music of the opera of "Cavalleria Rusticana." The Courtland street office of the American Bell Telephone Company in New York also contained a transmitter and from that point there came over the wires the distinct music rendered by a full military band.

Fully 1500 persons visited the scene of the fete yesterday. The receipts of the first night's business was in excess of $1000. The officers and committees will be found on page 6.

WORK OF THE INDIAN LIBRARY

"Allow me to say," writes General Morgan in a recent letter, "that I am interested in the special work in which you are engaged, and that I think the Society is doing an excellent service in providing our schools with literature. Young people's and children's books and papers are greatly appreciated among them, and fill a very important niche."

"These periodicals are of great value to us," writes a superintendent, "as the reading of them puts our older pupils in touch with the world at large, through the medium of high-class literature of a grade to be comprehended and enjoyed by them." Another superintendent writing to thank the given of some delightful magazines for children, says to the sender: "If you could see six or eight little Indian girls seated on the floor in my office and hear their ejaculations, or if you could search the nooks along the Gila River (this was written in the early winter before the floods) and see Indian boys who have sought solitude to spell out the stories, or hear them relate the stories to me after supper, when I have permitted them to take the books off to read, then you might feel the influence you were spreading over eighty-five of the wildest—yes, you cannot imagine how wild they are. Can I give you an idea when I tell you many of them don't know how to sit down on a chair, get into bed, never eat from a plate or a table, in fact, don't know how to wash and dress themselves. Such as are now enjoying your gift, were such as these eight months ago—one year ago, some eight months ago."

A superintendent writes to the sender of a number of periodicals: "The scholars express a good deal of pleasure and seem very grateful to you for your kindness. Evenings we have the room lighted and allow the scholars access. I know it would give you pleasure could you look in upon them and witness their manifestations of enjoyment, some searching for a story or something which they can read or understand, others taking great delight in turning over leaves and looking at the pictures." A returned Indian student now teaching in a government school writes: "We have over sixty bright little Indian boys and girls in the school. Their ages range from four to sixteen years. About one-half of the school understand English. The most are only familiar with the simplest English. They take great delight in looking at pictures, and those that can read are sure to find out what is said about the pictures. They become interested in simple stories, and seem never to tire reading them or having them read to them. I am glad you have been instrumental in providing me with papers for them. I have had none, and every old book, such as geographies, Bible pictures, school readers, dictionaries, catalogues and advertising books, which have been asked for time after time, and I have never refused to allow them to pursue these what seemed pleasures to them. How many boys and girls in the East, would like to send their old picture or child's story book to these book-and-paper furnishing Indian children? I know there are many who would like it if they only had the chance. These boys and girls," he adds, "soon learn and love the ways of civilization. They would rather be clean than dirty, they would rather live in a house and have clean clothes, bed and properly prepared food than to live in their miserable camps, and some when here awhile refuse to go home when their parents come after them."

A returned student put the case in a nutshell when in answer to a paper sent him, he wrote: "We Indians ought to have some papers or books to pass away our time, instead of passing our time in war or ghost dances." Indians are as man enough to like some amusement, and if one in ten of those who can read will find this in our best class periodicals, shall he not have it? We want these people to get hold of American ideas. American ways will follow. For, "as a man thinketh, so is he."

Do the letters help them at all?

A returned student, the teacher mentioned above, speaking of some of the difficulties in his way, says: "All these troubles are around us, before us, and they tend to take our ambitions, hurt our feelings, manhood, womanhood and discourage us; and so I come back to where I first started and say that I am glad we have true friends to whom we can look back and feel that they are with us, they are praying for our good. It not only helps us, but it's giving us influence which will help the old men and women now sitting in their tents to come better, to be more than what they have been. Pray for us, stand by us and spread the idea that the Indian is a man that he is capable of learning and that he can become just as useful, good and intelligent citizen as any foreigner or race of people."

And already practical help also in different ways is growing out of this acquaintance (like that given to the Indian woman in Indian Territory who wants to establish a sewing room with a machine to teach the Indian women around her to use their feet on the treadle instead of in ghost dances), this letter quoted is only one evidence of many that these educated young people are ready to strive for American ways if they are properly supported by a strong public opinion and the presence of some industries that will give the restless Indian feet and hands some better occupation than ghost dances and better satisfaction than hunger. Suppose our cities swept bare of work, would all their literature and art and religion save them from violence not less savage and disastrous than the ghost dance of the Indians? Every letter received lays bare, intentionally or incidentally the desolation of reservation life, and is doing its work toward rousing the people to the fact that American laws and American institutions, and American industries are the only means to make American citizens, that only those Indians are citizens in any satisfactory sense who have been living under these somewhere, and that the other Indians will wait in their savagery until they have the same, and when they do have them, will climb into citizenship by the same strong ladder that has helped up so many barbarous warts from foreign shores.

But in this department not only are lists of Indian names to be supplied, but periodicals and senders must be recorded to know what is secured and avoid duplicating; when papers stay they must be looked up or, if lost, their pieces supplied; when the sender receives an acknowledgment, this must be straightened out or they will tire of sending and their periodicals be lost to the work, those who ask for information must have it, that they may go on to more work; and new forces must, if possible, be put into the new avenues that correspondence opens up. For all this, constant clerical help is needed and must be paid for, in addition to the stationery and postage which are not light items, will not societies and individuals who see in the work a present good and the opportunity for better personal acquaintance with Indians and Indian needs sustain by contributions of money as well as of periodicals, the department of Indian Libraries, which depends up on such support for every dollar it receives, and which is now in the condition of those people who are loath to confess that their purses are empty because it is so painfully near the truth.

All contributions to the Indian Library Fund will be acknowledged in this department by

Who does not want to hit the bull's eye in everything that he undertakes? Those who also like to do it when that bull's eye glares upon them from the centre of a target will have an opportunity at the entertainment and sale in Associates' Hall, Oct. 28 and 29. He will only have to go into the shooting gallery and take aim, and he will be sure to hit if he knows how.

The cornerstone of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Centre street, corner of Crescent avenue, Rev. D. J. Wholey, rector, will be laid next Sunday at 3:30 p.m. His Grace, Archbishop Williams, will perform the ceremony, and will be assisted by Very Rev. Wm. Byrne, vicar general, and a large number of clergymen.

Mr. John Thompson is janitor of the alleys and is evidently taking advantage of the opportunity offered and thus far holds the championship of Upper Falls. The alleys are now engaged on the evenings mentioned up to Nov. first.

At Richardson's market, olives, apricots, berries, lima beans, cauliflower, prunes, grapes, pine apples, cranberries, California peaches, citron, egg plants, dates, horse radish, pumpkins, squash, spinach, meats, fish, chams, and oysters.

Miss Ada Phipps of Jamaica Plain was quite seriously injured yesterday, in a fall from a horse. She was out riding with Mr. Bradford, son of J. H. Bradford of Roslindale, in a two-wheeled dog cart and on Station street the shafts broke, frightening the horse who ran. Mr. Bradford succeeded in jumping out but Miss Phipps was thrown out by collision with a tree and was injured seriously. Miss Phipps struck on her head and shoulders and was unconscious for a long time. She was taken into Mr. Bentall's house and was attended by Dr. Dodge, Dr. Warren and Dr. Janison of Jamaica Plain. Mr. Bradford's face was badly cut and his back injured.

The citizens of Newton have had particularly favorable opportunities of hearing the principles of the Republican party discussed during the present campaign, having been addressed by several of its most brilliant speakers. The rally announced for Tuesday evening next, October 20th, in Associates' Hall, promises to be one of the most enjoyed of the campaign, and it will be noted with satisfaction that the list of speakers is headed by the name of Hon. J. Q. A. Brackett. Mr. Brackett possesses a strong hold on the sympathies and affection of the people as well as on his political associates, and it was only the other day that ex-Gov. Long at the Surf Club referred to him as "one of the truest and most virtuous and able men who ever sat in the Governor's chair."

He will be warmly welcomed on Tuesday evening, both for his popularity and the uniform excellence of his addresses. E. A. Burdett, Esq., and W. S. Slocum, Esq., will speak on the same occasion and the meeting will be presided over by A. L. Harwood, Esq. It will be a pleasure for spectators to listen to such a collection of speakers as these, and will be an excellent opportunity for the ladies, always heartily welcomed, to hear the prevailing issues of the campaign discussed in a masterly fashion.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

For other Upper Falls items see 7th page.

A carpenter employed on the new dwelling house now being erected for Mr. George M. Thompson on Cheney street, fell from a staging last Friday sustaining fatal injuries. Dr. Thompson attended the unfortunate man and had him taken to the Newton Cottage Hospital but he died soon after reaching there. The deceased was a resident of Needham.

The corner stone of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Centre street, corner of Crescent avenue, Rev. D. J. Wholey, rector, will be laid next Sunday at 3:30 p.m. His Grace, Archbishop Williams, will perform the ceremony, and will be assisted by Very Rev. Wm. Byrne, vicar general, and a large number of clergymen. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. R. J. Barry, rector of St. Cecilia's church, Back Bay, Boston.

The Quinobequin bowling alleys have been opened to the public and on Monday and Saturday evenings between the hours of 7 and 10 they will be available. If not under other engagement the public will also be admitted Wednesday and Thursday evenings and holidays. The remainder of the week will be open for the members and their guests and they can also be leased by private parties. Mr. John Thompson is janitor of the alleys and is evidently taking advantage of the opportunity offered and thus far holds the championship of Upper Falls. The alleys are now engaged on the evenings mentioned up to Nov. first.

Read Fund Lectures.

The Read Fund Lecture Course will consist this season wholly of illustrated lectures, and will be given in Eliot Hall on Thursdays, Nov. 5, 12, 19; Wednesday, Nov. 25, and Thursdays, Dec. 3, 10, 17.

The first lecture on Nov. 5, will be given by Mr. Rosewell B. Lawrence, Secretary of the Appalachian Club of Boston, on Norway, its Fiords and Falls. The Rev.

Arthur W. Knapp, formally resident during some years in Japan, will give the second lecture, Nov. 12th, upon the country, its manners and customs.

Nov. 19th, the lecture will be by Rev. G. E. Merrill of Newton on Venice the Beautiful. Mr. Merrill's lecture will be illustrated by more than sixty views of palaces and canals, and will describe the history and romance of this wonderful city of the sea. Mr. Merrill's study of the subject was made during a visit to Italy, and the lecture which has been several times delivered will be found instructive and entertaining.

Nov. 25th, Mrs. Bernard Whitman, assistant editor of "Lend a Hand," and well known in other literary works will lecture on "Brazilian Life." Mrs. Whitman has resided many years in South America, and speaks from her own knowledge and experiences, and her lectures are described as most entertaining and instructive. Nowhere in South America has education in the arts and sciences been more progressive than in Brazil under the liberal patronage of the last Emperor, and the lecture will display not only the scenery, but the industries of the country. The last three lectures will be given by Prof. D. G. Lyon of Harvard College under the general topic, "The Assyrian Monuments and the Old Testament." His first lecture on Dec. 3rd, will be upon the "Babylonian and Assyrian Books," their discovery and decipherment. The 2nd lecture Dec. 10th, will be on "Sardanapalus," and will give a picture of the great Assyrian world power, which destroyed Israel, and which reached its culmination under this Monarch. The last lecture, Dec. 17th, will be on "Cyrus," treating of the Jews in exile, and the great movements which led to their restoration. These lectures are all richly illustrated and will be of inestimable value to the student of Old Testament history and of great general and popular interest.

Last spring Mr. Brickell of Elgin street tied to the limbs in an apple tree ten or a dozen wide mouthed bottles half full of molasses and water; a large number of worms, millers etc. lost their lives in the bottles, and the apples were not worm eaten and but few fell off. This season Mr. Cutler of Knutson street has tried Mr. Brickell's plan of last year with a tree in front of his house and there are a number of barrels of nice fair russet apples on the tree and very few fallen off. Last season Mr. Cutler did not try the bottles and sweetened water plan and the larger part of the apples fell off without getting ripe and were very wormy.

The death of Mrs. Dwight Chester has brought sorrow to many in Newton Centre, where she has resided since 1863. She was a kind friend to all, highly esteemed and possessed the soul of all. Her loss will be deeply felt in the church, where she was one of the active members, and the family have the sympathy of all in their affliction. Mrs. Chester was born in Worcester, N. Y., and was of the same family as Rev. Dr. Storrs of Brooklyn. She taught for several years in the public schools of Otsego County, N. Y., and was married to Mr. Chester, N. Y., and was the mother of Rev. Dr. Storrs of Brooklyn. She officiated at the services. The interment was in the family lot at the Newton Cemetery.

The funeral took place from her late residence on Parker street, Monday afternoon, and there was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. Storrs of the Theological Institution, assisted by Rev. L. C. Barnes of the Baptist church, and Rev. Dr. Braslin, N. Y., a former pastor here, officiated at the services. The interment was in the family lot at the Newton Cemetery.

Grafting to All.

The high position attained and the universal acceptance and approval of the pleasant liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs, as the most excellent laxative known, illustrate the value of the qualities on which its success is based and are abundantly grafting to the California Fig Syrup Company.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

SOME OF THE VACANCIES TO BE FILLED AT THE NEXT ELECTION.

There will be some changes in the City Council the coming year, as several of the aldermen have announced their intention of withdrawing at the end of their present term, feeling satisfied that they have done their duty by the city.

Alderman Coffin from Ward One will be returned without doubt, as his constituents are well satisfied with his service and he will probably have the nomination of all parties.

Alderman Fenno of Ward Two will retire, as he feels that he has done his duty by the city, and that some other man ought to take up the burden. Mr. Fenno's determination will be regretted, as he has been very faithful and efficient, and his management of the highway department this year will make a brilliant showing. Ward Two has never sent a better representative, and will find it difficult to fill his place. There has, as yet, been very little talk about his successor, but nothing definite will be done until Councilmen Mead and Churchill decide whether they will consent to serve the city another year.

Ward Three is always fortunate in its aldermen, but they have a habit of refusing to serve more than one term, and Alderman Luke is to be no exception. He thinks that his business and his home interests demand more of his time and will therefore refuse to run again. The city is fortunate in having such men as Mr. Luke to work for it, and his decision will be regretted. Two men are mentioned as his successor, Mr. James T. Allen and Mr. E. B. Wilson, either of whom would be a credit to the ward. Mr. Allen is so identified with Newton, and is such a thorough going business man, that he would be a very useful member. Mr. Wilson also has large interests in the business man, and Ward Three will be fortunate if it elects either of them.

In Ward Four there promises to be a contest as usual, but the chances are in favor of Alderman Crebore being retained if he will accept a second term.

Ward Five will certainly return Alderman Hyde, who is one of the "hustlers" of the board, as has been shown in the work done by the public property committee, of which he is chairman. Repairs had been put off from year to year, until the buildings were in a rather shabby condition, but Alderman Hyde's committee has pushed things through, and have put the buildings in better repair than they have seen for years. On other committees Mr. Hyde has also done good work, and he certainly comes honestly having his aptitude for city work, his father having been one of Newton's most public spirited men.

Ward Six cannot do better than to return its whole delegation, and Alderman Shepard will accept a renomination, only on condition that such is the unanimous wish of his constituents, and this seems to be the case. He has been a very useful member, and certainly deserves the honor of a renomination.

Ward Seven will also probably return its whole delegation, as Alderman Shepard will accept a renomination, only on condition that such is the unanimous wish of his constituents, and this seems to be the case. He has been a very useful member, and certainly deserves the honor of a renomination.

Bishop Storer's mills will start up next week under a new manager. The large engine at the works broke last week which has been the cause of the last shut down.

Lewis Burns has been appointed day brakeman on the branch. Frank Militkin, formerly employed in this position, has severed his connection with the road.

Mr. Geo. Richardson has resumed his position of conductor on the branch after being two weeks on a circuit train. Mr. John Beans has taken his regular train after an absence of four weeks.

At the Methodist church on Sunday preaching at 10:45 a.m. by the pastor, subject, "The Handful of Corn upon the top of the Mountains." Meeting of the Epworth League at 6 p.m. and Harvest concert at 7. All are invited.

The A. B. Stover troupe presented the play "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" to a large audience in Franklin Hall on Thursday evening. The cast was made up of seven characters, the performance on a whole very good.

Mr. Geo. Marshall, clerk for C. C. Thomas, was thrown from his wagon last Friday at corner of Grove street. He was taken home unconscious and with head badly bruised, but is now able to resume work. The cause of the accident was an unfastened seat.

When laid flat on the track, the wooden frame folded up when not in use, and it is designed to have one on each end of the car. The railroad commissioners have experimented with all sorts of life saving inventions of this nature, and this one seemed to work very satisfactorily. A large crowd of spectators witnessed the various experiments.

Graham Muffins
BY MARIA PARLOA.

For twelve muffins there will be required half a pint of graham, half a pint of flour, one generous tablespoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, half a teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful and a half of Cleveland's Baking Powder, one egg, and two gills and a half of milk.

Mix the dry ingredients and rub through a sieve. Turn the meal from the sieve into the mixture. Beat the egg till light and add the milk to it. Stir this into the dry mixture. Add the butter, melted, and beat well for half a minute. Bake in buttered muffin pans for half an hour in a moderately hot oven.—(Copyright, 1891, by Cleveland Baking Powder Co.)

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is the anti-dyspeptic leavening agent. The leaven comes from cream of tartar and soda, nothing else; no ammonia or alum.

in Wollaston last evening. He has been suffering from rheumatism for many years, and his death was due to that disease. Mr. Russell was born in Somerville, 50 years ago, but while young went to Quincy. After the war, in which he saw honorable service, he came to Newton to live, and only removed to Quincy some two years ago. His elder son died about a year ago, and now the family are again bereaved. He leaves a widow and two children, a daughter and a son. The funeral will be held at Woaston, at his late residence, on Monday at 2 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Moses King celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary, Monday evening, by giving a reception at their residence on Belmont street. A very large company was present including many prominent residents of Newton and adjacent towns, and a large number from Cambridge. The house, which has been recently re-modeled, and a large addition built, was decorated with flowers and potted plants, and an orchestra stationed in the upper hall rendered some fine music during the evening. Mr. Paxton served a handsome collation during the evening, and there was a large assortment of gifts suitable to the occasion, displayed in one of the upper rooms, comprising many specimens of tin ware. Mr. and Mrs. King received many hearty congratulations and good wishes for many happy returns of the day. The usual guests of Mrs. Harold G. Clowes, a brother of Mrs. King, and William Smith, both of Cambridge. Many handsome costumes were worn by the ladies present, Mrs. King's costume being a cream silk, brocaded with contrasting colors, and richly trimmed with lace.

—NEWTON COLORED REPUBLICANS.

A WELL ATTENDED AND ENTHUSIASTIC RALLY IN THE CITY HALL.

A rally under the auspices of colored Republicans was held in the City Hall, West Newton, last evening. It was well attended and enthusiastic in character.

The meeting was called to order by ex-Representative Slocum, who introduced Hon. Gorham D. Gilman, senator second Middlesex district, as the presiding officer. Senator Gilman spoke of the progress of the colored race and its many able representatives who had been honored in the state and nation. He presented as the first speaker, the colored campaign orator, ex-Representative A. B. Lattimore of Boston, who received a hearty welcome.

Mr. Lattimore commenced by saying that he was a Republican. Continuing, he said that the Republican party was shaken up, not in the sense intimated in the election of Col. Allen and the entire Republican state ticket. Some colored men, he continued, condemn the Republican party because they do not hold office. They forgot that Abraham Lincoln emancipated 4,000,000 human beings, and that the colored people owe allegiance to those who have recognized the principle of equal rights for all men. In conclusion, he urged the colored men of Newton to support the Republican party—the party that had always stood up for the colored race. He paid his respects to Hon. Roger Q. Mills, and said that the people of Massachusetts had no instruction from the men from Texas, and that they would not be humbugged by his fallacious tariff arguments.

Following ex-Representative Lattimore, addresses were given by Hon. J. C. Chappelle of Boston, Butler R. Wilson of Boston, Councilor Louis F. Baldwin of Cambridge and Lewis L. Stater of Newton. Allusion was made to Gov. Russell's action in the case of Commissioner Osborne, and his excellency was pretty sharply criticized for his speeches portraying the waning industries of New England.

The Moneyed Bostonian.

One of Mr. Howell's clever hits at the college bred man in his brilliant novel now running in the Boston Sunday Herald: The local opinion scarcely did justice to old Northwick's imperfect discharge of a father's duties; his critics could not have realized how much som capacitatis, if not tastes, which Northwick had inherited, contributed to that very effect of respectability which they observed. Their wide range of books, the familiarity with the more exterior of literature, restricted as it was, helped Northwick later to pass for a man of education, if not of reading, with men who were themselves less read than educated. The people whom he met in Boston were all Harvard men, and they could not well conceive of an acquaintance, so gentlemanly and quiet as Northwick, who was not college bred, too. By unmistakable signs, which we carry through life, they knew he was from the country, and they attributed him to a freshwater college. They said, "You're a Dartmouth man, Northwick, I believe," or, "I think you're from Williams," and when Northwick said no, they forgot it, and thought that he was a Bowdoin man; the impression gradually fixed itself that he was from one or other of those colleges. It was believed in like manner, partly on account of his name, that he was from one of those old ministerial families that you find up in the hills, where the whole brood study Greek while they are sugar-coating off in the spring, and that his own mother had fitted him for college. There was, in fact, something clerical in Northwick's bearing, and it was felt by some that he had studied for the ministry, but had gone into business to help his family.

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

THE ALDERMEN VOTE TO TAKE THE STONE CRUSHING CONTRACT FROM MR. HALE.

The board of aldermen met Monday evening and transacted a good deal of business. All the members were present and Mayor Hibbard presided. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The Secretary of the Commonwealth sent a communication stating that John Worcester, Jas. Richard Carter, John W. Carter, Chas. S. Dennis, Geo. P. Staples, F. F. Raymond, 2nd, Chas. W. Leatherbee and Joseph Foster, had applied for a certificate of incorporation of the Newton Kindergarten, with par value of $2,500, and inquiring of the city clerk if any of the incorporators had committed crimes which would bar them from receiving such a certificate. The matter had been looked up by the city clerk and all the incorporators were vouchered for as moral and law-abiding citizens, and the board voted to recommend that the certificate be granted. The affair was an amusing bit of red tape.

Theodore W. Trowbridge and Henry Cobb were granted licenses as auctioneers.

Papers from the common council were referred in concurrence.

C. H. Cashman, C. J. Meloon, Fred V. Smith and B. P. Lerner were appointed special policemen for the street railway company.

ELECTION OFFICERS.

The following election officers were appointed:

Ward One—Inspector, W. M. Russell; Deputy Ins., Irving T. Fletcher. Ward Two—Precinct 1, Deputy Ins., P. A. Mulligan. Ward Three—Clerk, Geo. S. Dalby. Ward Five—Precinct 2, Warden, S. L. Eaton; Deputy Warden, T. T. Locke; Inspector, C. P. Clark Jr.; Deputy Ins., H. W. Holbrook, Eleazer Thompson, E. F. Clifford. Ward 6—Deputy Clerk, A. E. Fowle. Ward 7—Deputy Ins., S. G. Coolidge.

Alderman Hyde explained the reasons for the addition to the public property appropriation, and it was passed in concurrence.

Albert Gay sent in a bill for $5000 for damage done to his land by the city turning water upon it, which prevented its being sold for building purposes. The outlet to the city's drain ought to have been lowered from 4 to 6 feet, so that many tramps had to be kept there.

Alderman Hyde thought the best way would be to use the materials of the present station in building the rear part of the hose house, and perhaps $500 might be saved in this way.

Alderman Coffin moved to amend the order by appropriating $8000, and add cells for the police to the hose house.

Alderman Luke said it was very important to know if this would inconvenience the police department.

Alderman Harbach favored making provision for the police in the new hose house.

Alderman Hyde said we had no better firemen than those of Wards Six and Seven, and their engine houses had an addition for the police.

Alderman Coffin said he proposed this to save expense.

Alderman Sheppard said he was also opposed to mixing firemen and tramps.

Alderman Harbach asked how they were to be mixed, if the entrances were separate and a strong brick wall separated the hose house from the police station. They were just as separate as the aldermanic chamber and the West Newton police station.

Joseph R. Smith, who has been nominated by the Democrats for representative to the General Court, resigned his position as Warden of Ward Five.

The order passed by the common council appropriating $7,500 for a hose house for Nonantum came up, and an error in copying having been corrected, was tabled on motion of Alderman Hyde, as it was not explicit in regard to the site.

The assistant assessors asked to have their rate of compensation increased to $5 a day. Referred to the board of assessors.

A. H. Soden and others asked to have Park Place, Ward 2, sewerred. Referred to sewer committee.

The Nonantum Worsted Co. asked for concrete walks on Chapel street.

W. E. McNamee petitioned for license to erect a stable 30x30 on Bailey court, Ward 2, and to keep 8 horses therein; referred to license committee.

On motion of Alderman Luke on the petition of Geo. F. Peck to move a building from Washington to Waltham street, the petitioner was given leave to withdraw.

Seward W. Jones, C. F. Johnson and A. B. Putney asked to have sidewalk constructed on Columbus street and covered with gravel.

J. R. Smith and others asked to have Hyde street from Walnut street to Lake avenue accepted as a public highway.

Some twenty-four residents of Waban asked to have the city council take some measures to have the street lights turned on more regularly and with greater frequency, and called attention to the necessity of lighting the streets from dark until midnight.

Edward Leis of Elliot street was granted license to build a one story building, 16x25, for store and barber shop.

The New England Telephone company asked for license to put up 5 poles on Regent street; also to locate poles on Ash street from Auburn to Islington street; also to locate 4 poles on Margin street; 3 on Chestnut, and 14 on Hillside avenue. A hearing was granted on the above petitions for next Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

F. A. Leeds gave notice of intention to build house on Linder Terrace, 30x35 feet.

Geo. M. Fiske for the Auburndale Village Improvement Association, asked the city to take some steps to open the path from Ash street to Charles river. Referred to city solicitor.

Alderman Fenno reported in favor of granting the following petitions: Sidewalks, J. E. Hollis, Washington street; A. W. B. Huff, Park and Elmwood streets; W. E. Hickox, corner of Judkins and Jenison streets; crosswalks, Pearl street at Thornton; Emerson street at Boyd; Bay street at Park street; Hamilton street in front of A. W. Weeks, Jr., and in front of E. Winsor. Orders were passed for their construction and also for building two crosswalks on Concord street, Lower Falls.

An order was passed for the relocation of Ridge avenue, southerly.

Alderman Harbach reported in favor of laying a sewer on Tremont street, from Belmont to Pembroke, and on Pembroke from Tremont to Arlington. Orders carrying out these recommendations were adopted.

Alderman Sheppard of the printing committee reported that bids for the city printing had been received and the Newton Graphic was the lowest bidder. The committee recommended that the Graphic be awarded the contract.

The water board reported that on the water pipes recommended by the board of health to be laid on Florence street, Ward 6, the five per cent guarantee would amount to $25, and the probable annual income would be $12.

On motion of Alderman Harbach an order was passed for the laying of a sewer on Gardner street, westerly from Jewett street.

In regard to the Telephone company's petition for licenses to erect poles, Alderman Hyde moved that a hearing be given next Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Alderman Luke asked to hear from the chief of the fire department.

Chief Bixby said it was simply a relocation of poles now erected, and a few had been added. The old poles were considered unsafe. The motion for a hearing passed.

THE CRUSHED STONE CONTRACT.

Alderman Fenno reported resolutions declaring that Contractor Chas. H. Hale was refusing to comply with the requirements of his contract with the city, and is not supplying broken and crushed stone of the size and quantities required of the city, and an order was passed that the work under the contract be suspended and the highway committee was authorized to take possession of the apparatus of the city for crushing stone, and do the work at the expense of the contractor, and that his sureties should be held responsible for any loss.

A hearing was granted for Monday, Nov. 9, at 8 o'clock, on the order for taking land of Albert Brackett, near Jefferson street, for the sewer.

An order was passed for construction of a sewer from Emerson to Carlton street.

An order was passed rescinding the location of a fire alarm signal box at the corner of Murray and Otis streets.

The sum of $2,781.81, received from the dog tax of 1890 was added to the appropriation for public schools.

NONANTUM HOSE HOUSE.

Alderman Hyde presented an order appropriating $7,500 for the Nonantum hose house, to be built on the site recommended by the majority of the public property committee.

Alderman Coffin asked what about the police station now on the site.

Alderman Hyde said that could be provided for later.

Alderman Luke said it was very important to know if this would inconvenience the police department.

Alderman Harbach favored making provision for the police in the new hose house.

Alderman Hyde explained the reasons for the addition to the public property appropriation, and it was passed in concurrence.

Albert Gay sent in a bill for $500 for damage done to his land by the city turning water upon it, which prevented its being sold for building purposes. The outlet to the city's drain ought to have been lowered from 4 to 6 feet, so that many tramps had to be kept there.

Alderman Hyde thought the best way would be to use the materials of the present station in building the rear part of the hose house, and perhaps $500 might be saved in this way.

Alderman Coffin moved to amend the order by appropriating $8000, and add cells for the police to the hose house.

Alderman Luke said it was strongly opposed to mixing firemen and tramps.

Alderman Hyde said we had no better firemen than those of Wards Six and Seven, and their engine houses had an addition for the police.

Alderman Coffin said he proposed this to save expense.

Alderman Sheppard said he was also opposed to mixing firemen and tramps.

Alderman Harbach asked how they were to be mixed, if the entrances were separate and a strong brick wall separated the hose house from the police station. They were just as separate as the aldermanic chamber and the West Newton police station.

Alderman Hyde said he had seen no bugs on the firemen yet, but he wished to have this matter settled.

On motion of Alderman Luke the whole matter was referred to a committee of two from the public property committee and two from the police committee, to report at an early date.

On account of an informality the committee on printing withdrew their report.

WATER PIPE.

On motion of Alderman Harbach 475 feet of 6 in. pipe was ordered laid on Ward and North street's, Ward 2, to cost $525; 150 feet of 8 in. on California street, $225, and 50 feet of 6 in. on Pine street, $470, total $1280. Also 335 feet of 6 in. on Florence street, $430.

The petition in regard to the Auburndale path was referred to the highway committee.

The unexpended balance of the Boyd street appropriation was transferred to Emerson street appropriation.

Alderman Harbach reported in favor of taking private lands for sewer from Jewett street, westerly, and hearings were set for 7:30, Nov. 3, before the aldermen, and for Nov. 9 before the common council.

Alderman Coffin reported the warrant for the state election, Nov. 3, and it was passed and ordered advertised.

An order was passed relocating Woodward street from Chestnut street to the aqueduct. Also an order extending Highland street from Forest to Lenox streets.

An Amusing Story of a Tin Plate Factory.

Mrs. Gougar of Indiana, a speaker last week, at a Prohibition meeting in Boston told the following story of the Tin Plate Factory in Piqua, Ohio:

Week before last, for the purpose of proving that tin plate can be made, and that the Republican party is the one that ought to have the votes of the people, the news was heralded all over the country that tin plate was made in the city of Piqua, O.—that Mr. McKinley had made tin plate on that day.

So this circumstance, having been minutely telegraphed all over the United States, was supposed to settle that issue, and it was believed that Ohio would go Republican in consequence, and that then the Republicans would sweep the country in 1892, all owing to the fact that tin plate is made in this country, namely at Piqua, O.

Now, last Friday night I spoke in that city, trying to prove to the people that the protection of a boy was as much concern to this country as the protection of a tin horn. Believing in informing myself on the subject as fully as possible, and the Democrats having stated that tin plates could not be made either in Piqua or any other part of the United States, I thought I would go out and see for myself this large tin plate factory which had been described. I wanted to take pride in the fact that tin plate making in the United States was an accomplished success, and that by it, as Mr. McKinley said, $20,000,000 had been put into the pockets of the American workingman and manufacturers.

So I was taken to the tin plate mills of Piqua—to the factory which was pictured so graphically in the Republican press. You remember Mr. McKinley said he was taken in a carriage and did not know exactly where he was going. But he was driven about a mile east of the town, and all at once he beheld a large factory, and as the carriage came in sight of it whistles blew and out came about 500 workingmen who hurried for McKinley and protection—a protection which tells us that tariff is not a tax. It told how Mr. McKinley alighted and went into the rolling room, and there was a piece of steel plate rolled out until it was almost as thin as a wafer, showing that the steel plate on which first-class tin is made can be made in the United States.

Mind you this factory was nothing more nor less before this day than a corrugated iron works. It then told how Mr. McKinley was taken into a room where there was a great furnace in which stood a boiling cauldron of tin wash, and how the man placed his manly form over that dangerous boiling cauldron as he stood upon the edge of that great furnace, how he buttoned up his Prince Albert to the throat, and, grasping the tongs as if he was in the habit of handling tongs just like any other workingman—the Republican newspapers said—and with these tongs he took this plate of steel, which he had seen rolled out, stood over this boiling cauldron and dipped it up, amidst the hurrahs of the workingmen who, I presume, stood with their Prince Albersts rolled up to their sleeves. [Laughter.] They hurried for McKinley, the production of tin, the Republican issue and success to the high tariff in the interest of workingmen.

So I said to the manager of this great tin plate mill as I was kindly received in his office, "I have come to settle for myself the question, whether tin plate is made in the city of Piqua or not. I want to know if these pesky D-mocrats are telling awful falsehoods about this tin plate mill. I want to see for myself. Will you kindly let me see the product of this mill?"

Standing in his office and by his desk, he picked up a piece of tin about 18 by 24 inches, held it up and said "Madam, this is our product."

I asked, "Is that all your product?" [Great laughter and applause.]

"Well," he said, "Madam, it's all we have on hand just now [more laughter]; would you not like to write your autograph on it? Here's Mr. McKinley's autograph, and also the names of some friends of his."

I said, "Oh, no; I want you to allow me to make a piece of tin plate here today, so that I can send it to my husband as a memento, because Mr. McKinley made a piece, and sent it to his wife [laughter], and I want to have the privilege." I added, "You must have had a great many orders to have your stock so exhausted."

He said, "Yes, we have had a large number of orders, so our stock is exhausted."

"How many boxes can you produce in a day?"

Thinking for a moment he said, "You know this factory is quite young—only about 30 days old."

"Yes," said I, "established since the campaign began in Ohio." [Great laughter and applause.] "Exists mostly on paper, does it not, Mr. Manager?"

With a slight twinkle in his eye and a smile he said, "I think we could produce 20 boxes in a day. We hope to do that much."

"Very well," said I, "won't you please take me and let me see the size of the boxes?"

"Well," said he, "we have no boxes on hand just now." [Loud laughter.]

"Won't you let me go and see where the boxes are made and the measurements from which you make the boxes?"

"Well," said he, "we have no boxes in process of construction."

"What," said I, "a business that is so rushed that you have had your stock exhausted and your boxes gone and you are not having any more made? Why?"

I said, "the."

is receiving has certainly given you a wonderful boom in business. I should think it would be good policy to keep it up. But if I cannot see the product and cannot see the boxes, won't you take me to the furnace where Mr. McKinley stood and let me stand there, too? I want to be honored, and I think it would be an honor to the Prohibition party to let me stand in the tracks of Mr. McKinley. And won't you bring me those tongs, for I want to grasp them as Mr. McKinley did?"

So he took me through the room where they are in the habit of washing corrugated iron to give it the tin process. He there showed me a furnace. It consists of an old-fashioned soap kettle set in a brick casing. Kettle and furnace all told, were not over 3 feet across and 18 inches high; and this was the boiling cauldron over which Mr. McKinley bent his manly form. [Loud and prolonged laughter.] And when the tongs were brought to me by the manager, with a broad smile rippling over his face, I asked him if I might not buy them and frame them. [More laughter.] He could not think of parting with them, but he said he should frame the piece of tin which Mr. McKinley had made.

I said, "please let me make a piece of tin."

The kettle seemed to be covered with ashes from a coal bin, and I saw in it what looked like melted lead, and when I asked to dip a piece of steel in it they assured me that the fires were out and it was not in a molten condition. So I was deprived of the honor of presenting to myself a piece of tin made in the United States.

I stand here tonight to say that the political party which is reduced to such methods of deception and to bringing up such an issue as that, that when a man will resort to such a barefaced fraud as that whole affair was, telegraphed all over this country and written up in column after column, especially in the Republican papers—that when the Republican party is reduced to such straits that for an issue, it ought to be hurried from power by a self-respecting constituency. [Great applause.]

I pronounce it the most outrageous fake and fraud that was ever perpetrated upon a reading public. The whole tin plate mill of Piqua, that has made what is the issue today in the Ohio campaign, and what is supposed to be the issue in 1892 for the Republican party, never cost $25 all told outside of the price of the kettle [laughter], and it only shows the dishonest methods that are practised today, while the party whip is wielded over the shoulders of an idolatrous people.

MR. SHUMAN'S DAY.

His Palatial New Store Visited by 20,000 People.

Congratulations and Flowers Poured in Without Stint.

After months of hard work the spacious and beautiful new premises of A. Shuman & Co., at the corner of Washington and Summer streets, were Wednesday opened for public inspection. More than 20,000 people visited the various departments, among whom being many persons prominent in the social, business and professional world. The state and city governments were also represented. A few of the visitors were Hon. T. N. Hart, Hon. Weston Lewis, D. Kaffenberg, D. F. Barry and John Shepard of Boston; August Weil and Capt. G. W. Townsend of New York and Capt. J. C. Wyman of Valley Falls, R. I. Congratulations were received by cable and telegraph from many European houses, and from friends and business associates in all parts of the United States.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, and made a conspicuous figure of the opening.

Using the old entrance on Washington street, the visitor realizes what an immense amount of work has been accomplished. This floor, formerly the children and youths' department, has been entirely remodelled, and on the right, taking up the whole depth of the building, is the new hat department, with its fine display. The other side of the floor has a tempting array of furnishing goods, umbrellas, canes, etc. The entire rear wall of this floor is covered with plate glass mirrors, the effect of which is very striking. Opening off this floor on the left is the boys' clothing department, occupying the entire space formerly used by the Shreve, Crump & Low Jewelry Co. This department, 6330 square feet in extent, is piled high with fashionably made-up garments for boys. The show windows are of such large proportions and so entirely unobstructed that the whole interior is flooded with light.

So I said to the manager of this great tin plate mill as I was kindly received in his office, "I have come to settle for myself the question, whether tin plate is made in the city of Piqua or not. I want to know if these pesky D-mocrats are telling awful falsehoods about this tin plate mill. I want to see for myself. Will you kindly let me see the product of the mill?"

years a leading trustee of the Boston City Hospital and an active director of the Manufacturer's National Bank. In the conduct of his business he has always been governed from the standpoint of the purchaser and produces nothing but good goods for a fair price.

All the goods that are purchased to be made into clothing receive his personal inspection, and are carefully tested to determine their pure wool fibre and non-fading properties before a single yard is allowed to be bought. A. Shuman & Co. have made a record in the clothing trade that is unsurpassed by any concern in existence. It is their established policy to ever reach out and acquire new business, and their success is evidence that the public co-operate with them.—From the Boston Record of Oct. 15.

of cheap imitations, at "cat prices," offered by unauthorized dealers as Dr. Pierce's genuine medicines.

To prevent fraud and imposition, the genuine guaranteed medicines are sold only through regularly authorized agents and at the following long-established prices:

Golden Medical Discovery (for Liver, Blood and Lung Diseases) . . . $1.00 Favorite Prescription (for woman's weaknesses and ailments) . . . $1.00 Pleasant Pellets (for the liver) . . . 25c Comp. Ext. Smart-Weed . . . 50c Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy . . . 50c

But at these prices, which must be paid for the genuine, Dr. Pierce's medicines are not only the best, but they're the cheapest, for they're guaranteed in every case to benefit or cure, or the money is refunded.

There's "value received," or there's no pay.

The manufacturers take all the risk by selling them on trial! As no other medicines are sold through druggists, on such liberal and trying terms—it's an insult to your intelligence for any dealer to attempt to substitute other medicines for these, by recommending them to be "just as good," only that he may make a larger profit.

Rev. D. W. Faunce will deliver the sermon at the dedication of the new Baptist church in Malden, Nov. 23. He was pastor of the church 20 years ago.

ENTRANCE TRANSCRIPT HAS BEEN CONSOLIDATED WITH THE DRAW

THE STATE CAMPAIGN.

The state campaign has less than two more weeks to run, and both parties are evidently determined to make the most of the time. The daily papers are filled with reports of political meetings and the Herald, which aims to give all sides, has added so many pages that no one could hope to read it all, and have time left for ordinary business. The campaign rallies of all parties are well attended, and the people are generous with applause, but they look upon the speeches too much in the light of an entertainment to please the political managers. In spite of the great hurrah that is being made, it is evident that the voters are so far not very enthusiastic. They are very good natured, but politics has become a good deal like speculation in stocks. The outside public are not in it, and the traders are the only buyers. So with politics, one rarely hears any political discussions on the cars, or in waiting rooms, and one gentleman whose business brings him in contact with a large number of men every day, gave the general experience when he said that not a man has spoken to him about politics this fall.One reason for this may be in the fact that this is an off year, and it is hard to get up much excitement in a contest where both parties have put up good candidates, and represent nearly the same state issues, or pretend that they do. Perhaps, also, the Australian ballot, with the opportunity for each voter to decide upon the merits of every candidate, has something to do with the philosophical calmness of the average voter.It is not the fault of the managing committees, for never before was the state so thoroughly stumped, and the voters so appealed to by the party organs and the party orators. Both sides are making extraordinary efforts and prominent speakers of the first magnitude are imported into the state to tell the doubtful voter which candidate for governor he should favor. There is certainly something humorous in the fact of Mr.
Reed of Maine and Mr. Mills of Texas being called in advise Massachusetts people which of two candidates for governor they should choose, and it is as if in our approaching city election we should import some Springfield or Fall River man to tell in whom we should choose the Mayor. But state issues are receiving very little attention in this campaign.THE Charles River Commission has had their attention called this week to the condition of things on the river from the Arsenal bridge to Watertown. The river is now dangerous to the health of all who live along its banks, and it is far from being a thing of beauty when the tide is out, and all the filth and refuse from the factories above is exposed to view, and the odors are wafted abroad.
One way to remedy the nuisance, which has many advocates, is to build a dam near the arsenal, just high enough to insure that the channel of the river shall be covered at low tide. Another way is to dredge out the bed of the river, and for this Congress appropriated $20,000, but on conditions. Watertown has already made provision to make the changes required in its bridges, but Boston has as yet done nothing and there is some danger that the time in which the money is available will elapse before anything is done.THE most amusing thing in this campaign of education was Mrs. Gougar's account of her visit to Mr. McKinley's tin plate factory at Piqua, Ohio, where the famous tariff doctor made his much advertised tin plate. Even the most hardened advocate of a Chinese wall could not read her account without a smile at the way a woman has punctured this very transparent humbug. Mrs.
Gougar's descriptive powers are of the first rank, and she has added some genuine humor to the tin plate controversy. Her description is given in our Tariff Reform column. If this is the effect of women on politics all will welcome her appearance on the stump.SENATOR Hoar and Collector Beard are coming to West Newton, next Thursday evening, and will try to make converts in that mungwump locality. And in this they will be assisted by Elihu B.
Hayes, of the Republican Club. The Republicans have had the best speakers in Newton this campaign, and it rallies make converts, the Republican vote ought to be largely increased.All who could not get tickets for the Lodge-Russell joint debate, this evening, can console themselves by reading the full report in to-morrow's papers.
The managers ought to have put the tickets up at auction and divided the proceeds, as they say ten dollars was offered in vain for single tickets.THE description of the Ohio "Kangoroo" ballet makes Massachusetts people more than satisfied with their own official ballot. The Ohio affair is a very poor imitation, and a cross for governor carries with it a vote for the whole ticket.

their innning. Baby McKee—who is not the baby at all, but the elder of the two children—is the strongest magnet.

The Newton Club Fete.

The Saturday Evening Gazette says:
The ladies apartments in the new quarters of the Newton Club, now building, bid fair—no pun intended—to rival any amount of elegance that the lords of creation, or such portion of them as come within the boundary of the city of Newton, can bestow upon their own domain. The fete of the past week, a kind of glorified bazaar, was an inspiration, and quite the prettiest affair of the kind that zeal ever undertook or clever management carried to success. Newton society, from Auburndale to Chestnut Hill, turned out en masse in its masculine evening coats and fetching feminine toggery, and the atmosphere of success enveloped the theatre of action—the erstwhile General Hull residence, which the club now occupies, and the grounds from the newsard at the outermost corner, where the fete organ, the Faerie Queen, struck the keynote of the occasion—to the farthest inmost recesses of the upper story, where half a hundred ingeniously gotten up symbols puzzled the Yankee mind to guess the titles of so many books. All the way there were such an array of captivating wares as would have charmed the heart out of a stone, to say nothing of dollars from lavish hands, and small wonder the ducats literally rained into the till. Mrs.
McKee was of course the guest of honor on the opening night, and graciously held her court behind a case of Russia leather goods, which held something naturally of which every man on the premises stood in awe. She looked very well in French gray faille, with corset and basque of white guipure, and a toque of white and gold, with heliotrope velvet roses. For the rest, every ward sent its prominent matron and buds, fair as the flowers, sweet as the candy, and gay as the butterflies that turned the tea room into a bower of color. Yesterday the little folks had their innning. Baby McKee—who is not
the baby at all, but the elder of the two children—is the strongest magnet.

FREE POSTAL DELIVERY.

THE SYSTEM TO BE EXTENDED TO NEW-TONVILLE.Free delivery will probably soon be established in Newtonville. The citizens are in favor of the project, and it has been petitioned for by Postmaster Turner.The Newtonville Postoffice district comprises Ward 2 in Newton, and its population is in excess of 5000. Free delivery has already been established in Wards 1 and 7 and a portion of Ward 6.The Newtonville Postoffice is now classified as second-class, and its business has developed largely under the administration of Postmaster Turner, who was appointed by ex-President Cleveland and re-appointed by President Harrison. He was endorsed by nine-tenths of the Republicans of his postoffice district for reappointment.Postmaster Turner has been working quietly for free delivery for several months, and the postal department at Washington will soon take action upon the petition. According to a dispatch which was published in the Herald this morning, a decision will be reached in the Newtonville case within 90 days.The residents are jubilant over the prospect of free delivery, and are confident that it will be established.Newtonville has all the essential conditions for free delivery. It is the largest residential Ward in Newton, and the receipts from post office business are in excess of the amount fixed by law as a condition for the establishing of a free delivery system.There is also a possibility that the system may extend to West Newton, but whether Newtonville will be made an independent office, or attached to the Newton postal district is now the burning question.

—Mr. A. C. Judkins has bought a large lot of land on the south side of Edinboro' street and intends building several pleasant houses. Work has already begun and will be pushed rapidly forward.

—The concert to be given next Monday evening in the Universalist chapel will be a pleasing one, and it is hoped the young members of the Christian Endeavor may be gratified with the proceeds for their work.

—The invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Sara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Hill and Mr. Frank B. Eastman. The ceremony will take place at the residence of the bride's parents, Otis street, Thursday evening, Oct. 29.

—Mrs. S. F. Taft is making a specialty of party and evening dresses at her dressmaking parlor in Newtonville, with Miss E. Cunningham as her cutter and designer. All engagements promptly kept. S. F. Taft, Newtonville, 845 Washington street.

—The first regular meeting of the season of the Woman's Guild was held at the residence of Mrs. S. F. White, Newtonville avenue, Tuesday afternoon. Miss Grant gave a paper on the picturesque highways and byways of grand old Edinburgh.

—The board of health had a hearing on the Newton Carpet Cleaning factory, Tuesday afternoon, and the same ground was gone over, as at the aldermanic hearing. It was suggested that Mr. White conduct the dust into a damp room, or let it settle in water, and he probably will do this.

—A deeply interested group of ladies listened to the first of the Wednesday morning talks by Mrs. Mary R. Martin at her home on Prescott street this week. Friends will meet next Wednesday morning, Oct. 28, at 10:30 at Mrs. Chalonier's, Lowell street, subject, "American experiences of Columbus."

—Be sure and secure tickets for the musicale to be given in the Universalist church on Monday evening next. The artist will be a piano player, Miss Mary L. Hastings, soprano; Miss Anna S. Jorgenson, contralto; Mr. W. W. Cole, bass; Mr. Clarence Fischer, violinist; Miss Maud L. Gatchell, reader; little Ina Handy, violinist; Miss Ella L. Holt, accompanist.

—All interested in the science of "health by exercise" will be glad to know that Miss Kittle Thompson hopes to establish classes for ladies and children here the last of October. There could scarcely be a more thoroughly competent and earnest teacher than Miss Thompson, who is a normal graduate of the Allen Gymnasium, Boston, and a teacher of large experience and success.

—The initiatory meeting of the "Neighbors Club" was held on Tuesday evening on Lowell street, and the idea met with cordial response from all friends. The evenings chosen for social intercourse and entertainment were the first and third Wednesdays of each month, the character of the entertainment to be decided by the hostess of the evening of whom Mrs. Charles B. Somers is the first.

—Tremont Hall building owned by the Newton Real Estate Association is undergoing improvements. The lower floor will be entirely remodeled and three new stores constructed, to face on Washington street, large plate-glass fronts will be used, and the interior fittings will be most attractive. The alterations will provide for a covered stairway and new entrance to Tremont Hall. The work is being done by Higgins & Nickerson under the supervision of Alderman L. E. Coffin.

—Rev. A. W. White preached on Sunday morning from the text, Romane 14, V: "One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike; let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind." While taking broad and fair view given as ever the most liberal minded, the speaker gave as his own idea of the purpose of life, the "inspiration and lift to be a day that should be made the brightest, happiest day of all the week in the home, that there should be flowers and music and reading and every thing that should tend to strengthen family ties and unite members in love and harmony."

—The agent of the state board of registration and pharmacists has been visiting the druggists in this city and was in Newtonville the first of the week. He found everyone in all the drugstores of the city possessing the necessary certificate of registration. In Lowell since May 1, he says 40 drug stores were started. One registered clerk was employed to about every half dozen stores as a bluff to cover the law. The drug stores, so-called, were carrying on practically a liquor business, and the proprietors will be arraigned under the law. Persons carrying on the drug business must be provided with a certificate of registration issued to them personally by at least one of their regular employees.

—The first socialie of the Y. P. S. C. E. was held Monday p.m. in the Universalist church and proved quite a successful affair. A collation was served and the following musical and literary program given: piano solo, Garette, Miss Ella Holt; piano solo; Gondolier Waltz, Miss Kittle Atwood; vocal solo, "Revel My Heart," Miss Maude Davis; reading, "The Heavenly Guest," Mrs. Luella Wadsworth; piano number, "Festal Life," Miss Ruth Coffey. Letters were read from Willie Higgins of Denver, Col., and Mrs. Mary T. Goddard. Miss Emma Park was in charge of the sociable and was assisted by Misses Hattie Calley, Grace Troffeter, May Troffeter, Eugenia Bartlett and George W. Troffeter.

—Mrs. Mary B. Thompson, wife of H. R. Thompson of Newtonville, died at the Newton Cottage Hospital Sunday morning after a short illness of typhoid fever. She was 25 years of age.

—The circumstances attending her illness were very bad. Mr. Thompson and a daughter were on a European tour, and returned last week to find their home closed and Mrs. Thompson, a son and daughter, dangerously ill at the Cottage Hospital with typhoid fever. The funeral was held from the Central Congregational church Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. The church, under the direction of Dr. Will, "Done," "I would not climb the Heavenly steeps," and "Comfort Me," Rev. H. J. Patrek officiated. The interment was made in the Newton cemetery, and the pall bearers were G. F. Churchill, A. L. Gordon, E. E. Stiles and C. E. Roberts. The daughter and son are improving and it is hoped will soon be out of danger.

WEST NEWTON.

—Mr. M. J. Duane of River street, who has been ill with pneumonia, is now convalescing.

—Brook Brooks will visit the Church of the Messiah on the afternoon of Wednesday, Nov. 25.

—See notice of Mrs. Erving Winslow's readings at Newton Centre, at the Indian Library Fair.

—Mrs. E. O'Connor, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Corrigan, has returned to New York.

—An account of the dedication of the new kindergarten and Froebel school building will be found elsewhere in this paper.

—The Democratic Ward and City Committee have secured the court room at City Hall, as headquarters for Saturday evening.

—Mrs. Onthank, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. John Greenwood of Temple street, has returned to her home in Georgia.

—Be sure you hear Rev. Sam Small of Georgia, at Prohibition rally, City Hall, West Newton, Tuesday evening, Oct. 27, 7:30 o'clock.

—Mrs. E. C. Holmes has gone to Johnsville, Va., where he will pass his vacation. Officer Lee is supplying the vacancy on the patrol wagon.

—Rev. D. W. Faunce will deliver the sermon at the dedication of the new Baptist church in Malden, Nov. 23. He was pastor of the church 20 years ago.

—Mr. Fred M. Huestis, the advocate of storage batteries for street railways, has leased the house on Washington street, formerly occupied by Mr. Church.

—Hon. Geo. F. Hoar, Hon. A. W. Beard and Eliza B. Hayes, Esq., secretary of the Republican Club, will speak at City Hall, West Newton, Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, 8 o'clock.

—A project is in contemplation among the young ladies and gentlemen of this place for forming a dramatic club, the proceeds of the entertainments to be given for charitable purposes.

—A lady fainted at the conference at the Unitarian church, Wednesday afternoon, but she revived after being carried into the open air, and was able to leave for home at the close of the meeting.

—Mrs. Nathaniel Allen fortunately escaped a serious injury this week, falling the length of a flight of stairs. One foot was badly bruised, and she received a severe shaking up, but no serious results are apprehended.

—The cards are out for the wedding of Miss Elizabath A. Thordike of West Newton and Mr. Caleb A. Saville of Malden. The ceremony occurs Tuesday evening, Oct. 27, at the residence of Mr. J. V. Tebbets, Winthrop street.

—Mrs. Foxwill, who conducts a large boarding house on Washington street, is again looking for lodgers who have departed from town owing her a goodly sum for board. The case was reported at the central station Wednesday evening.

—The annual fellowship meeting of the Congregational church, 11th anniversary, will be held this Friday evening in the parlors and the church. Rev. Geo. A. Hood will preach next Sunday morning, John W. Wooley will speak on Temperance in the evening.

—Mrs. H. A. and Miss Gould presided at a high tea given at their residence on Otis street, Wednesday, from 4 until 6 o'clock. A limited number of invitations were sent out and those present were the neighbors and intimate friends. It was an occasion of a pleasant social character.

—Mr. Wellington Burnett, for over a score of years in the banking business in Boston, a well known resident of West Newton, died at Worcester on Tuesday, his 78th birthday. A son, Mr. Charles Burnett of Natick, and a daughter, Mrs. Frank Hunter of West Newton, survive him. The interment was at the Newton Cemetery on Thursday.

—Much sympathy is felt for Miss Alice Newell, who was injured by the falling of a beam in the Newton Club late Saturday. The weight of it came upon her limb, which is badly crushed and broken, and fears are entertained that small bones may be broken below, and she lies in a very suffering state. Miss Newell has only recently recovered from long illness and winter spent at a sanatorium.

—There are letters at the postoffice for R. Boyden, C. E. Crowell, M. J. Carroll, Mrs. M. Chism, Jessie Craigie, Margaretta L. Duncan, Mrs. Annie Denning, Mrs. Emery, Anna Fitzgerald, Mrs. Geo. H. F. Holland, Minnie Hayes, Kate Holden, Rev. T. B. Holloman, Deacon Mrs. H. F. Kimball, Mary Mylott, Emma R. McCarley, Miss C. U. Newman, Mrs. Shaw, Miss Isaac Stebbins, Mrs. Tucker, A. P. Well, H. V. Waters, Mrs. B. R. Wright, Geo. M. Wright.

—A prominent citizen of this ward sends us the following: "The choice for alderman in Ward 3 seems to be Mr. E. B. Wilson, and it is assured that he will accept the nomination. Certainly, no better choice could be made. Mr. Wilson is one of the wide-awake, born business men who reside in West Newton. He is a man alive to the needs of our city. He would serve in a manner acceptable to all, irrespective of party."

—An auction sale of house lots on Alpine and Otis streets was held Saturday afternoon. The property sold is a portion of a large estate owned by ex-Gov. Cladlin. The auctioneers were J. F. C. & E. Hyde. The following lots were disposed of: "Lot 1 containing 17,660 feet, to H. F. Ross at $9,000; Lot 2, containing 12,495 feet, to Richard Andrew; Lot 3, containing 8,000 feet, lot 7, containing 11,930 feet, to Harry P. Hall at 6 cents. The remaining lots, together with a wooden dwelling house will be disposed of at private sale."

—Quite a sensation has been made of the case of Nellie Costello, of River street who is said to have been unmercifully punished by her father. The details of the punishment are given in the Franklin school, on Oct. 12. The Boston Post has an article giving interviews with Dr. Thayer, who was called to attend the child, Mrs. Costello, and Dr. Minot, who has been before the police. Davis and Messrs. Bond and Monroe of the school board were present. The children are very much disturbed, and the master may be carried into the courts.

—The Baptist church was the scene of a pleasant affair last evening, the occasion being a reception tendered to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Faunce, who have just returned from their wedding tour. The reception was held in the church vestry which was decorated with tropical plants and autumn foliage. Dr. and Mrs. Faunce received in the afternoon Rev. Dr. and Mrs. L. Putnam, nearly 300 ladies and gentlemen were present, representing the parishioners of the West Newton Baptist church. During the evening a collation was served, followed by the customary social features.

—The October meeting of the South Middlesex Unitarian Club was held in connection with the South Middlesex conference of Unitarian churches in the First Unitarian church, Wednesday evening. In the afternoon Rev. Francis Tiffany of Cambridge spoke upon "The Present Worth and Use of the Bible" was delivered by Rev. Minot J. Savage of Boston. General discussion followed, and then a collation was partaken of. The delegates and visitors numbered 450 persons, and 37 churches were represented in the conference. At the evening session followed, after which an address was given upon "The Present Worth and Use of the Bible" was delivered by Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Faunce.

—The Baptists of the South Middlesex Unitarian Club, President Dr. Blanchard of Concord occupied the church and Rev. Brooke Herford, D. D. spoke upon "Forty Years in the Unitarian Ministry." The principal address was delivered by Rev. George L. Chaney, missionary agent for the southern states of the American Association. Referring to the Unitarian church, the speaker said: "The Unitarian church is the most perfect in the world." The class has formed a society of earnest workers, with president, secretary, lookout and social committees, etc., with the object in view of making a welcome place for those who would like to add their names to its number. The class will be held at 12 o'clock and all young men not in such a class will be welcome. It is on the same basis as the one Rev. Mr. Bishop organized in his church in the city of Springfield, Mass., a few years ago, which ran up to a membership of over 100 in six months. That class has continued in existence ever since averaging some 70 members for the twelve months.

—The interesting uniform Sunday school leaves have a most attractive teacher in Centenary Methodist church, Auburn date, Rev. Mr. Bishop, having started a Bible class for young men which it is expected will be most helpful to those who desire the best help and guidance. The class has formed a society of earnest workers, with president, secretary, lookout and social committees, etc., with the object in view of making a welcome place for those who would like to add their names to its number. The class will be held at 12 o'clock and all young men not in such a class will be welcome. It is on the same basis as the one Rev. Mr. Bishop organized in his church in the city of Springfield, Mass., a few years ago, which ran up to a membership of over 100 in six months. That class has continued in existence ever since averaging some 70 members for the twelve months.

further notice as follows: Monday, Tuesday and Friday, 10 to 1 a.m., Wednesday, 3 to 5 p.m., Thursday, 8.30 to 10 a.m.

—The attempted highway robbery and assault so widely reported in the Boston papers, were evidently by a man so crazy from drink that he didn't understand what he was doing.

—Hiram Fuller Russell, M. D., formerly a resident of this place, was uniting in marriage on Wednesday evening to Miss Bernice A. DeMerritt. Mr. and Mrs. Russell departed on a wedding tour and will be at home Wednesdays, Nov. 4 and 11 at their house, Pelham street.

—The letters remaining in the postoffice are for: Miss M. E. Clarke, Miss M. E.

—At the Methodist church in Newton Centre, next Sunday evening, the Rev. Josiah Hudson, missionary to India and delegate to the late Ecumenical Conference at Washington, will preach. In the evening the pastor, Rev. Wm. R. Clark, will speak of his personal observations on the Ecumenical Conference. Services will commence at 7 o'clock. All cordially invited.

—A very quiet wedding was that of Mr.
George E. Barrows of this place to Miss Elizabeth A. Corey of Roxbury, Wednesday evening. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride in Roxbury, Rev.
F. W. Bakeman, D. D., officiating, and only immediate friends being present. Mr. and Mrs. Barrows will reside in this city after returning from their wedding tour.

—A man under the influence of liquor was driving his team loaded down rather carelessly Wednesday last and Officer Fletcher arrested him. But who was driving the next moment, it was not quite clear, the horse going backward instead of forward, and the wheels of a sewing machine buggy near by were badly crushed. Officer Fletcher succeeded in controlling his man however, and locked

—The monthly vesper service at the Unitarian church will be held next Sunday at 4 o'clock, address by the pastor. The following is the musical program:

Antenn. "The Lord is Exalted," West
Hymn. Anthem, "God be with us," Brewer Tone, "A Salutation," Panofka Response, "Beyond the Smiling," Offertory, Violin Solo, Meditation.

Anthem, "Hear our Prayer," Albert
Mr. B. H. Harring, Mrs. Alice Clement

bass; assisted by Miss Merriman, violin organ and director, Mr. R. S. Loring. All are invited.

—Mrs. Stephen Ellis, who died Thursday evening after a long illness, was born in Newton, April 24, 1820, the youngest child of John Kingsbury and Thankful (White), who came to Newton in 1817, settling on Hammond street. Wm. C. Hale, Jr., of a short residence in Boston, her home has been in Newton Centre, where for many years she has been a member of the First church. She has watched by the death bed of children and husband. One daughter only survives whose devoted ministrations have lessened the sorrow and helped to bear the burden of declining years and its attendant sickness.

—The Bible school of the Baptist church will hold their Harvest festival on Sunday evening, Oct. 23rd, at 7 p.m. The school will be assisted by the double quartet of the church and the following principal selections will be rendered:

Processional, "Rejoice! The Lord is King," Response, "O Father Let Thy Will be Done," Schilling
Harvest Anthem, Salter
Song, "In Heaven the Stars Low are Shining," Rheinberger Ascription, "All Glory, Land and Honor," Schumann

—Next Wednesday and Thursday afternoon and evening, the entertainment and sale for the Indian Library Department fund will be held at Associates Hall. On Wednesday evening Mrs. Erving Winslow, the famous reader, will give selections from Rudyard Kipling, "The Man that Was," Mrs. Browning, Shelley; Miss Wilkins, "A Church Mouse," and J. M. Barry's

"The Counting of 'Tneheads Belle." A male quartet will sing. On Thursday evening the Thespians, our talented amateur society, will give "My Uncle's Will,"
and there will be music from mandolins, guitars, cornets, flutes, etc. Such excellent attractions ought to fill the hall on both evenings, and all friends of the Indians will hope that the affair will be a great success financially.

NEWTON TARIFF REFORM CLUB.

The Tariff is a Tax.

Every person interested in the subject of the Tariff, is cordially invited to take part in the discussions carried on in this column. Responses and comments will be given, inquiries, criticisms, and communications of every kind, whether coming from Tariff Reformers, Free Traders or High Protectionists. Address Secretary of the Tariff Reform Club, Newton Centre, Mass.

[Boston Herald.]

CARPETS AND THE TARIFF.

A NEW BATCH OF FACTS FROM ARTHUR T. LYMAN.

To the Editor of the Herald: The advance in the cost and price of carpets seems to be peculiarly annoying to the Republican politicians who are now trying to show that protection reduces prices, and as they do not understand, or do not fairly state the facts, it may be desirable to refer to some facts again.

Lowell carpets, both Brussels and ingrain, are known all over the country as the best of their kind in quality and style, and their prices are on record as the standard for very many years. Of course, I did not expect that Mr. Reed would know how the McKinley bill had affected them, and as he does not understand my views as to the tariff or my connection with many "protected" industries, I need only say that getting all the duties you want on your goods is not my way of looking at the interests of the country as a whole, but it is of the very essence of modern protectionism.

Of course, as different men's wants interfere, a tariff bill is a great log-rolling scheme, with very little regard for the public interest, though to carry along the public and get their votes a great deal is said about the interest of the working-man, and now that nearly all kinds of merchandise have fallen in price since the passage of the McKinley bill the interests of the consumer (hitherto ignored) are talked of with a great deal of affectionate sympathy.

But Col. Allen once bought a Lowell carpet about 20 years ago at two or three times today's price, and as he lives in Lowell he might have been expected to understand a little better than he seems to do the reason why carpets are cheaper than they were 20 or 10 years ago, and why the price of Lowell shares went up after the passage of the McKinley bill.

As hundreds of stockholders who live in Lowell tell him, the price of the stock went up because the price of carpets advanced.

That increased the profits of the company for the time because it had wool on hand at the old and lower price, and was selling carpets at a new and higher price. The price of the shares advanced, not $57, as he says, but $100. But dull trade has begun to tell on the prices, which have fallen again, and yet the increased costs and the annoying restrictions and ambiguities of the law remain.

I said something about the methods and inventions that had reduced the costs of goods in the past 10 or 20 years. There are several kinds of "invention;" one of them is that kind of thing that omits half of the truth and quotes a part only of a sentence. When one says that the tariff is the cause of the fall in prices and that inventions are merely concomitants, he should not omit the important fact that prices have fallen equally in free trade England. If it is of any comfort to Col. Allen, I can tell him that Lowell carpets have fallen about 40 per cent. in the past 10 years, and his neighbors in Lowell can tell him that nothing but the changes in mechanical work and in the methods and management of the work have made it possible for the company to meet without ruin the immense fall in prices. But this reduction in prices, as the result of improved machines and methods in 10 or 20 years is very different from a change in price as the result of dull trade from any temporary cause, whether it be a failure of crops, ruinous failures in the Argentine Republic or the McKinley bill.

One thing is certain; the manufacturers who asked for and obtained high duties hoped and expected to get higher prices. They were not fools enough to think that they could make money by putting down prices. Prices have jumped about three times much to their disgust. If executive American competition started relentlessly into existence by the McKinley bill, has reduced prices, it seems to a manufacturer more injurious than the former English competition. If protection reduces prices as speedily as they have fallen since the McKinley bill, manufacturers have had enough of it. If 50 per cent. protective duties were not high enough, 100 per cent. seems to be worse still, and we shall owe to this last reckless and monstrous tariff law the opening of the question of free trade.

If it is the McKinley bill that has advanced costs and reduced prices, to the disgust of the manufacturers, is it also the McKinley bill that has brought to a standstill more carpet looms than have probably been idle for 10 years?

And if so, are the carpet weavers and the spinners of carpet yarns as grateful to restriction and protection for stoppage of work as the Republican speakers profess to be for the general fall in prices? Did the Republican protectionist manufacturers who went to Washington in 1888 and 1890 give to these members of Congress any idea that it was a fall in prices they were seeking for through high duties? —ARTHUR T. LYMAN.

Increased Prices.

Col. Allen says that prices have not increased, and evidently shuts his eyes and ears to any further light on the subject. But Governor Russell at Lawrence presented a list of 122 articles, on which the tariff had been advanced, given him by one of the largest retail establishments of Boston, showing an average advance of 25 per cent over the prices of September, 1890, before the McKinley bill had been enacted. Included in the list are gloves, lace curtains, upholstered furniture, woolen dress goods, flannel wrappers, plush garments, pearl, vegetables, braid and crochet buttons, woolen hosiery, worsted coatings, astrakhan cloth, corduroy cloth, silk plush, etc., underwear of various kinds, corsets, scissors, pocket knives, domestic woolen blankets, quilts, spreads, mohair braids, laces, neckties, foreign umbrellas and parasols, cotton and linen handkerchiefs, serge and satin coat and sleeve linings, foreign and domestic waterproof cloth, etc. In some cases the cost of goods has been advanced to the merchant who for the time sells at the old prices.

The governor further gives a long list of articles of glassware and crockery on which duties were advanced where the retail price has been advanced from 6 to 20 per cent. These include common tumblers and goblets, on which the duty was advanced 15 per cent which are now selling at prices from 6 to 15 per cent higher; white lamp shades, pickle and preserve dishes, bowls, water sets and pitchers on which duties were advanced 12 per cent and which are now selling from 7 to 10 per cent above last year's prices; plates, platters, vegetables dishes, pitchers, bowls, mugs and various table dishes on which duties were advanced 10 per cent while prices have been increased from 5 to 12 per cent. On the basis of estimated average yearly consumption, the additional cost per year of these articles to the people of Massachusetts must be over $5,000,000 or over $2 per capita. Another table submitted shows an advance of from 17 to 104 per cent in the prices of common and double thick window glass, both imported and domestic, and on ground glass. Course tickets are $3 and single tickets $1.

Murdered.

The body of Julius Baer was found by freighters five miles west of here Tuesday morning in a terribly mangled condition. His head and face were smashed so as to be hardly recognized, and numerous wounds were found on his body. Mr. Baer was agent for the great blood medicine, Sulphur Bitters. Robbery was undoubtedly the cause, as he was well known to have a large sum of money on his person. As we go to press there is no clue to be perpetrated.

The Springfield Republican says on this question:

It would seem to be evident from a common-sense standpoint that taxes on wools or flax or other raw materials, which our manufacturers must import, must increase the cost of production to them, and, to recoup themselves, that they must throw over the increased cost upon the consumer. And it would seem evident also that increased taxes on imports of finished goods must increase their cost to the ultimate buyers. And it would further seem clear that a high tariff on competing imports may give opportunity for American manufacturers to form pools and rings, as they do in many cases, and to force up their prices on consumers to the high-tax level. To say that it is not the intent and effect of a higher tariff on imports to increase their cost to consumers, is to say that conditions of absolute free trade must be the aim and effect of such tariff. Such a tariff must of course be useless as a measure of protection. What do the Republicans expect to gain in the long run by now attempting to blind the eyes of the people to so manifest a fact?

[Springfield Republican.]

This carpet controversy seems to have aroused much of the spirit which moves the (in-)partisan. According to the Boston Herald, Col. Allen first asserted that carpets had been reduced in price. Then Arthur T. Lyman of the Lowell carpet company who was given as the authority of Mr. Allen's table, wrote that carpets had been increased in price because of the new tariff. Then another carpet manufacturer indignantly denied what Mr. Lyman said; and then a man who is himself a republican and a protectionist offered to produce bills in which that carpet manufacturer had increased the price of $6000 worth of his goods from $1.12 1-2 a yard, the price of a year ago, to $1.22 this year. This was given to lying, and never more so than when the disputants see different sides of the political shield.

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

HEARING ON CHEESECAKE BROOK AND OTHER BUSINESS.

Both branches of the City Council met Monday evening. In the board of aldermen all the members were present and Mayor Hibbard presided.

The election officers appointed last week were confirmed.

The report of the overseers of the poor was received for the last quarter, $2,431 had been expended on outside poor and salary of clerk, and there was a balance on hand of $1,991.

Alderman Crehore presented a petition from Herbert A. Boynton and thirty-two others of Newtonville asking that the proposed new house be located on the Wellington lot, as such location would best serve public interests. Referred to Public property committee.

Chas. A. Miner and others asked for street crossings on Lexington street at junction of Auburn and also at head of Freeman streets.

Horace Cousins was granted license to build two additions to stable on Beacon street, one 18x5 feet and one 16x25 for hen house and carriage shed.

John Cooney presented claim for injuries received in the hand by pickaxe while engaged in sewer connection work.

John Crafts presented claim for damages for fall on Pearl street.

W. H. McIntire asked for license to run an express wagon, with stand on Margin and Bowes streets.

James Grady gave notice of intention to build house 53x26 on Nonantum street.

Frank L. Chamberlain asked for license for express wagon with stand on Centre street.

S. B. Whittemore asked for license to build addition to stable on Washington street, Ward 7, 20x40 feet, to be used for store; granted.

Alderman Hyde from the license committee reported in favor of granting a 6th class liquor license to Sawyer & Co., Newtonville.

The Newton Real Estate Association asked for license to build addition 12x7 feet to Tremont hall building, Ward 2, to be used for stores; granted.

Alderman Sheppard reported from the printing committee that they had secured revised bids for the city printing, and on these Fanning & Co. were the lowest bidders, the amount of their bid being $507, and the contract was awarded to them.

On motion of Alderman Feno the unexpended balances left from the Chapel, Boylston, Hammond and Arlington street appropriations were transferred to the appropriation for the improvement of Bellevue street.

In the common council when this order came up, Mr. Forkall said Chapel street was still in bad condition and needed all the money appropriated for it, and he moved to non-concur, which was done. Afterwards, on being informed that the balance of the Chapel street appropriation was only $3.87, Mr. Forkall moved to reconsider, and the board concurred with the aldermen.

On motion of Alderman Feno the highway committee was authorized to open for travel River path, from Ash street to the Charles river, at an expense not to exceed $200.

CHEESECAKE BROOK.

The hour having arrived for the hearing on the petition for widening and reconstructing Cheesecake brook from Eddy street to the Charles river, the two boards went into joint convention.

Mr. E. T. Wiswall was the first petitioner. He said that his land abutted on the brook for some 500 feet. He had no trouble five years ago, when the brook was large enough to take care of what water came down, but so many new drains had been laid by the city, opening into the brook, that the quantity of water had been greatly increased. Now the water after a rain came down very quickly, and the brook could not carry it away. The city had widened and walled up the brook as far as Eddy street, and before that was done there was a good deal of trouble above, as the city had found in a recent suit. The job was begun at the wrong end, however, the widening ought to have been done at the lower end of the brook first, but now things were going on from bad to worse. Below Eddy street the brook was narrow and crooked, and below North street it had a fall of some 20 feet in reaching the river. If that fall was divided up above North street and the brook made 12 feet wide, it would care for the water. There was no freshet last winter, but his land was flooded to the width of 3 or 4 rods, which froze over, and the ice killed all the grass. Five years ago he had built a house on Parsons street, and the bottom of the cellar was a foot above the wall of the brook. He supposed that was enough, but the water now was frequently a foot or more high in the cellar, and other houses along the brook suffered even more seriously. Something ought to be done to carry this water off. He did not think it necessary to build a wall. The city engineer had estimated a big sum, but he had asked a reliable contractor to give figures, and he had said the work could be done for $800. The city ought to take care of this surplus water, as it had no right to endanger health and property. In the recent case in which the aldermen had been a defendant, the court said that the city had a right to empty water to the extent of the carrying capacity of the brook, but nothing. He had had a hundred loads of load carried off in one week by the high water.

Mr. H. N. Hyde, Jr., said he had suffered a good deal from the overflow of water. The brook ran by his land, and at the lower end, it was a good deal of the time under water, and sand and gravel came down and ruined his grass. The water had also backed up and ran down a little brook between his land and Mrs. Morrill's, and this brook which was dry in summer was often 3 feet wide after a rain or a thaw. Water had come into his cellar, and his family had suffered a good deal from colds and sickness, as the result. The only way to remedy matters was to widen and deepen the brook. Mr. Maynard, who was one of the worst sufferers, was ill tonight and could not attend. His land was under water all last winter, and it was rendered useless by the water. In summer the stench from the brook was terrible, when the water was low, the result of sewage being turned into the brook.

Mrs. Morrill said she owned three acres of land, which was often covered with water and the ice killed the grass and rendered the land almost useless.

Mrs. Fuller said she had suffered a good deal from the brook, which ran by her house. In summer the stench was terrible, and the brook would overflow after every rain and bring down sticks and stones and gravel, so that it was impossible to raise grass. Something ought to be done to relieve the land owners along the brook.

Mr. Avery said he suffered less than Mr. Maynard and some of the others, but his grass land had been ruined, and as the city was continually draining more water into the brook things would only grow worse instead of better.

Mr. Wiswall said that now they had more water than they could take care of, but the board of health was draining the Maguire meadow, and the water from this would go into the brook. A four foot drain was being put in there, and this was half the carrying capacity of the brook. He did not know what would become of them with more water.

The hearing was then closed and the joint convention adjourned.

The Pettee Machine Works and the estate of Henry Billings petitioned to have the city drain Chestnut street and Linden street.

An order was passed authorizing the mayor to lease for three or five years a room or rooms for elections in Central Block, Newtonville.

The board then went into executive session for about five minutes.

The hearing on the application of the N. E. Telephone Co.'s application for license to lay poles on Regent street was opened. Councilman Bratt stated that Regent street was not yet a public street, as it had not been accepted by the city, and as it was his property he supposed he was the only one who had anything to say about it. The hearing was closed with smiles all round.

The order appropriating $15,000 for school house at Waban was rescinded, and another order appropriating the same amount was passed.

Fairview street was ordered to be laid out, graded and accepted by the city.

The sum of $33,400 was appropriated for city expenses during November.

John Crafts presented claim for damages for fall on Pearl street.

W. H. McIntire asked for license to run an express wagon, with stand on Margin and Bowes streets.

Stephen G. Coolidge and eight others asked for one street lamp on Nonantum street, between St. James street and passage to the Charles river.

James Grady gave notice of intention to build house 53x26 on Nonantum street.

Frank L. Chamberlain asked for license for express wagon with stand on Centre street.

S. B. Whittemore asked for license to build addition to stable on Washington street, Ward 7, 20x40 feet, to be used for store; granted.

Alderman Hyde from the license committee reported in favor of granting a 6th class liquor license to Sawyer & Co., Newtonville.

The Newton Real Estate Association asked for license to build addition 12x7 feet to Tremont hall building, Ward 2, to be used for stores; granted.

Alderman Sheppard reported from the printing committee that they had secured revised bids for the city printing, and on these Fanning & Co. were the lowest bidders, the amount of their bid being $507, and the contract was awarded to them.

Residents of Hollis street, Ward 7, petitioned for concrete sidewalks.

CITY HALL.

A long discussion arose over the leasing of City Hall. Alderman Hyde said citizens of West Newton thought they had some claim to the use of the hall, as they contributed some $15,000 towards building it, and the public property committee would like to accommodate them if possible. According to an order of the board the hall was given up to the city engineer during the day time, and could only be leased evenings. It had been suggested that the city engineer put up a canvas partition, so that the rest of the hall could be leased.

Alderman Luke said there was now no other hall in West Newton to be secured, and he thought if the citizens could be accommodated in any way, they should be. The citizens of West Newton had a dancing class of some 80 pupils, and they wanted the hall from 4 to 6 Mondays. The music had been engaged and the invitations were out.

Alderman Harbach and Feno favored leasing it if possible, and the public property committee were authorized to let such part of the hall as was not needed by the city engineer.

THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

ANNUAL REPORT PRESENTED—COMMITTEE ON REVISED RULES TO REPORT IN PRINT.

At the meeting of the Newton school board Wednesday, the annual report was received and an order adopted authorizing the printing of 3000 copies. The superintendent's report was also received. In it reference was made to the organization of the Jackson and Prospect evening schools, where, it stated classes in mechanical drawing had been formed. The attendance was: Jackson school, 101; Prospect, 25.

The superintendent's recommendation that the schools of the city be closed on Friday, Oct. 30, in order to permit the teachers to attend the convention of the Middlesex County Teachers' Association, was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Bond reported for Mr. Drew of the committee on revision of rules and regulations. He moved the adoption of an order authorizing the printing of the report and an order providing for an adjournment of the board until Wednesday Nov. 11, for the purpose of discussing it. Both orders were adopted.

John R. Henderson was appointed janitor of the Hyde school building and his salary fixed at $30 per month.

Mr. Lawrence reported for the drill instructor of the High school battalion that twenty-five boys were enlisted for military drill. The boys, he said, were light weight, averaging 55 lbs. and too young, averaging 11 years. Maj. Benyon says that boys under thirteen should be prohibited from military drill. A motion, presented by Mr. Lawrence, disqualifying twenty-five boys in the department of military drill was unanimously passed.

On motion of Mr. Bond an order was passed appropriating $13,641.64 for departmental expenses of the current month.

A petition of Mr. W. H. Gould and twelve others requesting the appointment of an additional teacher in the Waban school was referred to the Ward Four district committee with power.

On motion of Rev. Mr. Hornbrook it was voted to increase the salary of the secretary of the board from $300 to $500 per annum, starting from July 1, 1891.

Mrs. Davis made some inquiries in behalf of the president of the W. C. T. U. in regard to teaching temperance in the schools, as required by law. Supt. Jones said that temperance instruction was being provided and that the work would be properly mapped out, as soon as possible. He expected, he said, to report definitely upon the subject by Jan. 1.

On motion of Mr. Lawrence, the board voted to authorize its secretary to collect the printed reports of the school board and complete arrangements for binding them.

An order relative to the school appropriation was rescinded and a new order passed requesting the city council to appropriate $132,100 for the school department expenses of 1892.

At the Station.

A familiar scene from Howell's new story in the Boston Sunday Herald: The train was a little late, and Elbridge was early; after a few moments of formal waiting, he began to walk the clipped horses up and down the street. As they walked they sent those unives which horses can give at will; they moved their heads up and down, slowly and easily, and made their bellies jangle noisily together; the bursts of sound evoked by their firm and nervous pace died back in showers and falling drops of music. All the time Elbridge swore at them affectionately, with the unconscious profanity of the rustic Yankee whose lot has been much cast with horses. ## CARPETS AND THE TARIFF.

A NEW BATCH OF FACTS FROM ARTHUR T. LYMAN.

To the Editor of the Herald: The advance in the cost and price of carpets seems to be peculiarly annoying to the Republican politicians who are now trying to show that protection reduces prices, and as they do not understand, or do not fairly state the facts, it may be desirable to refer to some facts again.

Lowell carpets, both Brussels and in-grains, are known all over the country as the best of their kind in quality and style, and their prices are on record as the standard for very many years.

Of course, I did not expect that Mr. Reed would know how the McKinley bill had affected them, and as he does not understand my views as to the tariff or my connection with many "protected" industries, I need only say that getting all the duties you want on your goods is not my way of looking at the interests of the country as a whole, but it is of the very essence of modern protectionism.

Of course, as different men's wants interfere, a tariff bill is a great log-rolling scheme, with very little regard for the public interest, though to carry along the public and get their votes a great deal is said about the interest of the working-man, and now that nearly all kinds of merchandise have fallen in price since the passage of the McKinley bill the interests of the consumer (hitherto ignored) are talked of with a great deal of affectionate sympathy.

But Col. Allen once bought a Lowell carpet about 20 years ago at two or three times today's price, and as he lives in Lowell he might have been expected to understand a little better than he seems to do the reason why carpets are cheaper than they were 20 or 10 years ago, and why the price of Lowell shares went up after the passage of the McKinley bill.

As hundreds of stockholders who live in Lowell can tell him, the price of the stock went up because the price of carpets advanced.

The price of the shares advanced, not $57, as he says, but $100. But dull trade has begun to tell on the prices, which have fallen again, and yet the increased costs and the annoying restrictions and anomalies of the law remain.

I said something about the methods and inventions that had reduced the costs of goods in the past 10 or 20 years. There are several kinds of "invention;" one of them is that kind of thing that omits half of the truth and quotes a part only of a sentence. When one says that the tariff is the cause of the fall in prices and that inventions are merely concomitants, he should not omit the important fact that prices have fallen equally in free trade England. If it is of any comfort to Col. Allen, I can tell him that Lowell carpets have fallen about 40 per cent, in the past 10 years, and his neighbors in Lowell can tell him that nothing but the changes in mechanical work and in the methods and management of the work have made it possible for the company to meet without ruin the immense fall in prices. But this reduction in prices, as the result of improved machines and methods in 10 or 20 years is very different from a change in price as the result of dull trade from any temporary cause, whether it be a failure of crops, ruinous failures in the Argentine Republic or the McKinley bill.

One thing is certain; the manufacturers who asked for and obtained high duties hoped and expected to get higher prices. They were not fools enough to think that they could make money by putting down prices. Prices have tumbled about their ears much to their disgust. If excessive American competition started recklessly into existence by the McKinley bill, has reduced prices, it seems to the manufacturer more injurious than the former English competition. If protection reduces prices as speedily as they have fallen since the McKinley bill, manufacturers have had enough of it. If 50 per cent protective duties were not high enough, 100 per cent seems to be worse still, and we shall owe to this last reckless and monstrous tariff law the opening of the question of free trade.

If it is the McKinley bill that has advanced costs and reduced prices, to the disgust of the manufacturers, is it also the McKinley bill that has brought to a standstill more carpet looms than have probably been idle for 10 years?

And, if so, are the carpet weavers and the spinners of carpet yarns as grateful to restriction and protection for stoppage of work as the Republican speakers profess to be for the general fall in prices? Did the Republican protectionist manufacturers who went to Washington in 1888 and 1890 give to these members of Congress any idea that it was a fall in prices they were seeking for through high duties? —ARTHUR T. LYMAN.

Boston, Oct. 24, 1891.

Increased Prices.

Col. Allen says that prices have not increased, and evidently shuts his eyes and ears to any further light on the subject. But Governor Russell at Lawrence presented a list of 122 articles, on which the tariff had been advanced, given him by one of the largest retail establishments of Boston, showing an average advance of 25 per cent over the prices of September, 1890, before the McKinley bill had been enacted. Included in the list are gloves, lace curtains, upholstered furniture, woollen dress goods, flannel wrappers, plush garments, pearl, vegetables, braid and crochet buttons, woollen hosiery, worsted coatings, astrakhan cloth, corduroy cloth, silk plush, etc., underwear of various kinds, corsets, scissors, pocket knives, domestic woollen blankets, quilts, spreads, mohair braids, laces, neckties, foreign umbrellas and parasols, cotton and linen handkerchiefs, serge and satin coat and sleeve linings, foreign and domestic waterproof cloth, etc. In some cases the cost of goods has been advanced to the merchant who for the time sells at the old prices.

The governor further gives a long list of articles of glassware and crockery on which duties were advanced where the retail price has been advanced from 6 to 20 per cent. These include common tumblers and goblets, on which the duty was advanced 15 per cent which are now selling at prices from 6 to 15 per cent higher; white lamp shades, pickle and preserve dishes, bowls, water sets and pitchers on which duties were advanced 12 per cent and which are now selling from 7 to 10 per cent above last year's prices; and earthenware cups and saucers, plates, platters, vegetables dishes, pitcher, bowls, mugs and various table dishes on which duties were advanced 10 per cent while prices have been increased from 5 to 10 per cent.

On the basis of estimated average yearly consumption, the additional cost per year of these articles to the people of Massachusetts must be over $5,000,000 or over $2 per capita. Another table submitted shows an advance of from 17 to 104 per cent in the prices of common and double thick window glass, both imported and domestic, and on ground glass.

Following up this attack at Lowell Saturday night, Mr. Russel presented a further list of 127 articles consisting of various forms of iron and steel, tin plate, lead, groceries and provisions, etc., on which duties have been advanced, showing from the market reports of the Iron Age, New England Grocer, Boston Advertiser and other papers, an advance in the average prices of last September over September, 1889, of various percentages. He further gave from the Carpet and Upholstery Trade Review quotations on the carpets of the Bigelow, Lowell, Hartford, Higgins, Worcester and other manufacturing companies, showing an advance in average price for last September of from 3 to 15 per cent as compared with the average quotations for September of last year.

The Springfield Republican says on this question:

It would seem to be evident from a common-sense standpoint that taxes on wools or flax or other raw materials, which our manufacturers must import, must increase the cost of production to them, and, to recoup themselves, that they must throw over the increased cost upon the consumer. And it would seem evident also that increased taxes on imports of finished goods must increase their cost to the ultimate buyers. And it would further seem clear that a high tariff on competing imports may give opportunity for American manufacturers to form pools and rings, as they do in many cases, and to force up their prices on consumers to the high-tax level. To say that it is not the intent and effect of a higher tariff on imports to increase their cost to consumers, is to say that conditions of absolute free trade must be the aim and effect of such tariff. Such a tariff must of course be useless as a measure of protection. What do the Republicans expect to gain in the long run by now attempting to blind the eyes of the people to so manifest a fact?

[Springfield Republican.] This carpet controversy seems to have aroused much of the spirit which moves the tin-plate partisan. According to the Boston Herald, Col. Allen first asserted that carpets had been reduced in price. Then Arthur T. Lyman of the Lowell carpet company who was given as the authority of Mr. Allen's table, wrote that carpets had been increased in price because of the new tariff. Then another carpet manufacturer indignantly denied what Mr. Lyman said; and then a man who is himself a republican and a protectionist offered to produce bills in which that last manufacturer had increased the price of $6000 worth of his goods from $1.12 1-2 a yard, the price of a year ago, to $1.22 this year. How this world is given to lying, and never more so than when the disputants see different sides of the political shield.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.—The Jefferson-Florence Comedy Company, with Joseph Jefferson and W. J. Florence, will follow the New York Lyceum Theatre Company at the Hollis Street Theatre on Monday, Nov. 2. The engagement is limited to eight performances only, and these will positively be the only appearance in Boston this season of these noted players. Messrs. Jefferson and Florence do not play together after this season. Their company includes Mrs. John Drew, J. H. Barnes, W. F. Owen, Viola Allen, G. W. Detham, Fanny Denham Rowe, FitzHugh Owles, Carrie Jackson, Joseph Warren, H. W. Gilpin, Joseph Logan, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday matinees. On Friday and Saturday evenings the "Heir-at-Law" will be the program.

BOSTON THEATRE.—"The Old Home-stead" commenced the eighth week of its run at the Boston Theatre Monday evening, and the advance sales seem a continuance of the unprecedented patronage which has been given that excellent production.

Thousands of suburban friends have taken advantage of the excursion trains run by the several railroads the past fortnight. The popularity of the play is undiminished and in it Mr. Deenahan Thompson has a star attraction.

GLOBE THEATRE.—The repertoire of standard plays announced for the coming week at the Globe Theatre will afford Mme. Modjeska and the members of her organization splendid opportunities.

This talented artiste has always been a favorite in Boston, and her return has created a widespread interest in amusement circles. All of her productions will be made in the complete, accurate and artistic fashion for which Mme. Modjeska's companies have always been noted, and Manager Stetson has made every possible preparation to add his full share to the stage work incidental to the engagement, which continues only one week longer.

Mme. Modjeska will be supported by Mr. T. Thalberg, an English actor who has already won favor in other large cities. The company is well organized for the performance of the season's repertoire, and among its members will be recognized many who were associated with last year's Booth-Barrett combination,

TREMONT THEATRE.—"The Merchant," which has the attention of Tremont Theatre patrons this week and will also hold the stage during next week, has the distinguishing characteristic among plays of today, that its dealings are entirely with men and women whose feelings and the expression thereof are understandable. They are of the home and household; they are aroused by happenings and the everyday occurrences which make up home life. They are, therefore, wholly interesting. The play is a sermon without preaching, and even the text is not announced. It has its wit and humor and it has a stir and continuity of interest which is never flagging. It is safe to add that few plays of late years have had, so much, the deep and touching, the natural, and also artistic, interest which in the higher use of the term could be called a folk-play, as does "The Merchant."

The election returns from Massachusetts and other states will be received at the Tremont by direct wire and will be read from the stage in the between-acts of the performance next Tuesday evening.

Lecture Concerts.

Mr. Carlyle Petersilie is giving a course of six Beethoven, Schubert and Chopin lecture-concerts, of an analytical character at Steinert Hall, Boston. The first was given Monday afternoon, Oct. 19, and the others will follow on November 2, 16 and 20, December 14 and 18. These lectures are of great value to musical students, and furnish an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the three eminent composers, which could be gained in no other way. Course tickets are $3 and single tickets $1.

Popularly called the king of medicines—Hood-Sarsaparilla. It conquers scrofula, rheum and all other blood diseases.

Murdered.

The body of Julius Baer was found by freighters five miles west of here Tuesday morning in a terribly mangled condition. His head and face were smashed, so as to be hardly recognized, and numerous wounds were found on his body. Mr. Baer was agent for the great blood medicine, Sulphur Bitters. Robbery was undoubtedly the cause, as he was well known to have a large sum of money on his person. As we go to press there is no clue to be perpetrators.

Following up this attack at Lowell Saturday night, Mr. Russel presented a further list of 127 articles consisting of various forms of iron and steel, tin plate, lead, groceries and provisions, etc., on which duties have been advanced, showing from the market reports of the Iron Age, New England Grocer, Boston Advertiser and other papers, an advance in the average prices of last September over September, 1889, of various percentages.

This carpet controversy seems to have aroused much of the spirit which moves the tin-plate partisan. According to the Boston Herald, Col. Allen first asserted that carpets had been reduced in price.

Then Arthur T. Lyman of the Lowell carpet company who was given as the authority of Mr. Allen's table, wrote that carpets had been increased in price because of the new tariff. Then another carpet manufacturer indignantly denied what Mr. Lyman said; and then a man who is himself a republican and a protectionist offered to produce bills in which that last manufacturer had increased the price of $6000 worth of his goods from $1.12 1-2 a yard, the price of a year ago, to $1.22 this year. How this world is given to lying, and never more so than when the disputants see different sides of the political shield.

THE state campaign is nearly ended and next Tuesday will show the result of all the perfidious oratorical appeals of the campaign orators of both sides, who have travelled from one end of the state to the other. After Tuesday the orators of the defeated party will have leisure to study the art of making voters in a campaign, as illustrated by the success of their opponents. Massachusetts, New York and Ohio are the three states whose campaigns have attracted most attention.
In New York the Tammany issue ought to defeat the Democrats, and in Ohio the free-silver plank in the Democratic platform has been a great burden for that party to carry, and ought to lose them the election, on account of the good influence it would have on the country. In this state we have no Tammany party, and the Democratic platform on silver was even sounder than that of the Republican Massachusetts has always had such an overwhelming Republican majority that were it not for the overturn of last year, no one would have much doubt of the result. We have such a wholesome ballot law, and both sides have taken such unusual pains to educate the voters, that there is not so much reliance to be placed on a strict following of party as in former years. The leaders on both sides would give a good deal to have half the confidence they claim to have.

THE people of West Newton are left without a public hall by the occupation of City hall by the City Engineer's staff and by the leasing of Nickerson's hall to the Odd Fellows. The closing of City hall is regarded as a grievance, inasmuch as the West Newton people contributed some $15,000 to have the present structure located in their ward. The board of aldermen took the matter in hand, and have made arrangements for a dancing school to have the hall from 4 to 6 Monday afternoons, greatly to the delight of the officers on the floor below, who love the sound of tripping feet and a dancing orchestra. But life is not all bliss, and the City Engineer's young men are to be enclosed by a canvas partition during the dancing school hours. A modern hall, not higher up than the second story, and nicely fitted up, would prove a paying investment for some enterprising citizen in West Newton, and it would draw considerable patronage from the other wards besides. The north side of the city is very poorly supplied with halls, while the south side have Associate's hall and Lincoln hall, both modern and easy of access, and available for any kind of social events.

THE two constitutional amendments to be voted on next Tuesday are not attracting the attention they should receive, and many voters hardly know that any such amendments are to be voted upon. One amendment is that in relation to poll-taxes, the present law making the prepayment of poll-taxes necessary before the voter can cast his ballot. The opponents of the present law call it making a $2 bill of more importance than a man, and the amendment will if adopted repeal this poll-tax restriction, and if people understand its purpose the amendment will doubtless be adopted. The second amendment to be voted on makes a majority of the members of either branch of the general court a quorum to do business. Both amendments are described in the warrant for the city election, given in another column.

THE debate was as successful as the great demand for tickets indicated, and Messrs. Lodge and Russell made some very interesting speeches. No one has pretended that Mr. Russell has not made a good governor, and so Mr. Lodge had a difficult part to fill in finding fault, and only petty details could be touched upon. Which debater had the best of it was decided generally according to the party leanings of the hearer, but Mr. Lodge's criticism of Dr. Terry of Fall River and Mr. Hanegan of Lawrence bids fair to lose votes for Mr. Allen, although he was in no wise responsible for Mr. Lodge's remarks. If joint debates becomes the custom in Massachusetts they will add a new interest to campaign meetings.

THE Boston Police Commission, thanks to Mr. Lodge, Commissioner Osborne and Senator Cooke of Milford, has become one of the great issues of the campaign, which is unfortunate both for the commission and for the state. The mere suspicion that the election in Massachusetts could be decided by the votes controlled by Boston saloon keepers is enough to make every respectable voter turn prohibitionist at once. However, both sides are so watchful in this campaign that neither can make any secret deal without having it fully advertised by the other, so that all the facts will probably be known before election day.

NEWTON people should not forget that two representatives are to be elected from Newton next Tuesday, as well as a governor. The Republican candidates, Messrs. Chester and Howard, have served one year with credit to themselves and to the city, and have shown themselves safe and trustworthy representatives. All Newton matters that came up received their careful attention, and Messrs. Chester and Howard deserve a re-election. The Republican majority in Newton is such a large one, that it is not necessary to make any extended appeals in behalf of these candidates, and there is no doubt of their election.

It is difficult to find any storekeepers in Boston who will confess to having marked up prices. According to Col. Clarke's letter, while the price of a very few things may have been increased, they are all offering greater bargains than ever before, and they hope the Colonel will call public attention to this and also to the fact that greater value for the money is offered at their store than at any other place in Boston. Col. Clarke seems to be as rural in his simplicity as Denman Thompson.

BOTH party committees in Newton claim to have a majority of the new voters placed on the list, and the members of both committees have done a good deal of hard work, which has not been advertised. It is the duty of every man to vote, and the work of registration seems to have been carefully attended to.

THE location of the Nonantum house house is still further complicated, as a large portion of the residents of Newtonville in that vicinity have petitioned to have it placed on the Wellington lot. Why not let the matter out to a vote of the property owners interested?

THE intelligent voter seems to be very prevalent this year, and he attends all the rallies and applauds all the speakers, but attends strictly to business all the same, and does not say much about the way he shall vote.

ALLEN VERSUS RUSSELL.

FOR WHICH SHALL I VOTE?

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

The above is the question every intelligent, fair-minded and self-poised man should ask himself. What elements of character should we demand in an honored chief of our executive department? To the credit of Massachusetts, neither party has ever presented a man of questionable character as a candidate for this highest office in our state, except, perhaps, once in its history. This is purely a Massachusetts affair, and in my opinion such national matters as tariff, high or low, free trade, silver coinage, free or restricted, pensions, etc., should have no more prominence in the decision, than whether the candidate is a Trinitarian, Unitarian or Free Religious. Formerly such theological tests were made prominent. Strong objections were made to Thomas Jefferson on the ground of his being a Unitarian. What greater relevancy is there, in introducing the above national questions into a gubernatorial canvass, than in one for mayor of our city, a judge in our courts, a representative or a senator for our state legislature?

In sympathy with many of our citizens of both parties, as witness the admirable and timely letter of Edwin D. Mead, the Republican, in Tuesday's Herald, I have been mortified and disgusted with the character of the political discussions of late.

It was all very well last year to discuss tariff and other national questions when candidates were presented for suffrage, who were to represent us in the national Hall of Representatives. It seemed to many that some of those questions were so effectually disposed of, that they could rest until 1892.

As a tariff reformer, not necessarily a free trader, it became my duty last year to oppose the election of my friend, Mr. Candler, while it was my pleasure to vote for ex-Gov. Brackett, whom I have known and held in high personal regard during his honorable career from boyhood.

Because of my confidence in the honesty, ability and thorough integrity of our fellow citizens, Messrs. Gilman, Howard and Chester, they each received my vote, though not in the least doubting the high character of the opposing candidates. With the full and reliable reports of the speeches, discussions, etc., of the present canvass, it has not appeared necessary for me to attend meetings.

Still, wishing to see and hear Candidate Hon. Mr. Allen, I was present at Eliot Hall some weeks since and listened to Messrs. Allen and Henry Cabot Lodge. I was disappointed with both; the first, saying so little, and the last, so much.

The opinion previously held by me of Mr. Lodge was confirmed, doubly so, by his addresses the past week, that he is able and adroit, a sophistical and unfair politician, such as degrades the name politician from its nobler meaning.

Judging thus of Mr. Lodge, and by the staggering defeat he received last year in the enormously diminished vote in his district, in my opinion it will eventually be found that the influence of this gib tongued man is of far less potency with the sober thinking men of Massachusetts, than is supposed by those who now put him to the front. His criticisms of Gov. Russell's administration were so petty, ill chosen, and as is shown, untrue, that all except extreme partisans must see the animus of the reckless politician.

The operation on Massachusetts was brilliant and diverting from its previous puerilities. Having read and considered the ablest addresses on each side, as is our duty, though never having voted for any gubernatorial candidate presented by the Democratic party, I deem it my duty to vote for Gov. Russell, who has bound himself as an honest, wise, independent and fearless agent of the people, of the whole people of Massachusetts, after the type of John A. Andrew of renowned and revered memory.

NATH'L ALLEN.

THE Boston Police Commission, thanks to Mr. Lodge, Commissioner Osborne and Senator Cooke of Milford, has become one of the great issues of the campaign, which is unfortunate both for the commission and for the state. The mere suspicion that the election in Massachusetts could be decided by the votes controlled by Boston saloon keepers is

High School Notes.

Newton High completely out-played Mammals Team in football and in their junior league game, last Saturday afternoon. Newton scored from kick-off and then never let the Mammals have the ball for more than a few minutes. Blake gained considerable through the rush line and Inman made long runs around the end. Thomas, Stone and Kimball broke through, the latter scoring a touch down by himself. Jewett did the best work for the Mammals and was the only man who could gain any ground, while North was the strongest man on the line. The final score was 53 to 0.

Newton high, by playing the best kind of foot ball, defeated the Nobles' eleven 32 to 0 at Newtonville Wednesday, and so the Junior Inter-scholastic Series stands a tie between Newton, Nobles and Brown and Nichols. The game was a fine exhibition on the part of Newton. The work of her backs was great. Blake, the full-back, easily carried off the honors. Every time he would get the ball, he would run and once he got the ball when he was within ten yards of Newton's goal and rushed from that point down the field making a touchdown. Noble's eleven was somewhat crippled by not having the service of two of her best men. The backs did well. Pauson if he had received better blocking would have scored at least once. Sleeper would have had three times the centre, but he fumbled badly at times. Newton scored 10 in the first half and 22 in the second. The teams lined up as follows:

The Artillery Squad was examined Wednesday during the drill hours by Dr. Talbot of Newtonville. All men were in good condition, their lungs being above the average. Their song is as follows: Lieut., Stone, Sgt.-Major, Hollis; Gunner, Harlow; Artillery men, Hart, Hinckley, Booth, Bath, Bradley, Forsseen, Franklin, Seaver.

Two young men, evidently Scotch, claiming to be brothers visited me on Tuesday evening wanting work. They represented themselves as from the Universalist church in Glasgow, and were acquainted with the names of prominent clergymen and laymen of our denominations. They gave their names as Robert and Alexander Goddard, their other possible names being John, Harry, Peter, etc. They evidently vary their circumstances.

To Methodists they are probably from some Methodist church in Scotland; or Congregationalists from a Congregationalist church. They tell a pitiful story of pawned clothes and scant pocket books.

I have investigated the matter and am satisfied that they are impostors and are not to be trusted. The public are hereby warned against them. Exchange, please copy.

—The prize of ten dollars offered by Mrs. William Claffin last May for the best composition on "Our Flag" has been awarded Dorothy Q. (Miss Josephine Sherwood.) Mrs. Claffin's composition showed that much time and thought had been expended upon them, but especial mention should be made of the papers prepared by "Young America," Herbert Goodwin; "Christine, Betsey Trotwood, and "Evangeline." May this prize, the compositions and the thought bestowed upon the subject be an incentive to all children, particularly those who have been or are connected with the Claffin school. Let us always have at heart the best interests of the country which the flag represents, and be ready to zealously support it and its interests. Then our country will never be without patriotic defenders. This essay is given on another page.

—A concert under the auspices of the Universalist Y. P. S. C. E. was given in the church parlors Monday evening. An admirable program was rendered and great credit is due the young people who got up the concert for its success, proclivities to the contrary notwithstanding. Ena Hand's "Lullaby" was the most popular number. The meetings addressed by Mr. Woolley last Sunday were a grand success. The afternoon meeting in City Hall was held under the auspices of the Lodge of Odd Fellows, the hall being under the management of G. H. Hand. The hall was filled with spectators, and the audience was gratified by the performances of the various acts.

HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN FLAG.
THE PRIZE ESSAY BY ONE OF THE CLAFIN LIN SCHOOL PUPILS.

Some time ago Mrs. William Clafin offered a prize of ten dollars for the best composition on the American flag, to be written by one of the Clafin school pupils. The essays were signed with a fictitious name, and the prize has been awarded to the following, which was written by Miss Josephine Sherwood:

JACQUES MOBBING IN FLORENCE.

NO EVIDENCE TO SHOW IT WAS ON ACCOUNT OF NATIONALITY.

The assault on Mr. William W. Jacques and daughter of Boston by a Florentine mob last May has been investigated by the state department at Washington, and within a few days Mr. Jacques has received the following letter from Acting Secretary of State William F. Wharton:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, Oct. 23, 1892.

William W. Jacques, Esq., 125 Milk St., Boston—Sir: Referring to my letter of the 17th of August last, I have now to inform you that Mr. James Verner Long, our consul at Florence, has reported to the department facts of the assault by a mob on you and your daughter while driving through the streets of that city last Saturday evening.

His assailant was Alphonso Boulen, a Canadian, residing in Newton Upper Falls.

Boulen had been drinking, and went out on the platform of the train. Woodlock made him go back into the car, and forced him to take a seat, holding him down for a few minutes until he ceased to offer resistance.

As the train was stopping at the Newton Highlands station, Woodlock passed through the car occupied by Boulen with a couple of lanterns in his hands. Boulen sprung from his seat and stabbed Woodlock twice with a knife.

The first knife thrust entered his chin, the blade taking an upward course and making an ugly gash about five inches long, extending from the centre of his chin to the angle of the jaw under his left ear, very narrowly escaping the carotid artery.

The second thrust was received in the forehead, the blade entering above the left eye and passing downward, slitting the nose open.

After the cutting Boulen made his way out of the train, and ran down the tracks. He was followed by Conductor Smith, who came up with him on Walnut street, and succeeded in inducing him to return to the station.

Boulen still kept his knife in his hand, ready for use, but upon arriving at the station closed it and put it in his pocket. Conductor Smith then grabbed him, but the fellow got away. Smith gave chase, caught him again and knocked him down.

In the struggle that ensued Boulen tried to again use his knife, but only succeeded in slashing a hole in Smith's trousers. He finally threw the knife away, and was overpowered and handcuffed by Officer Fletcher who took him to the central police station at West Newton and locked him up.

The knife, which was of the ordinary pocket description, was found near the scene of the encounter. A portion of the blade was broken off, leaving a stub about two inches long, which was well ground and very sharp.

Woodlock had his wounds dressed by Dr. Dean and was subsequently sent to his home in Brighton by Officer Mitchell. His injuries are not considered serious, although he suffered great loss of blood.

Boulen said to Conductor Smith that he meant to cut Woodlock's throat, and to the officers, after his arrest, that he wished that he had slashed Conductor Smith for his efforts in aiding his capture.

He was tried in court Monday and pleaded guilty, and was held in $1000 bonds for trial at the Superior court.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

The Oakland ladies have been having a three days' "World's Fair" all by themselves. It was held at the large and elegant mansion of Mr. and Mrs. Murry for the benefit of the Y. W. C. Association building, and it proved a success socially and financially. The fair was divided into courts of various nationalities, as the Egyptian, Grecian, Hawaiian, etc. An international coffee garden was added in which were various refreshments.

In the Russian court the walls were adorned with furs and the ladies were dressed in Russian costumes. The visitor to this court was handed a portrait of Mr. Geo. Kennan and a paper containing a full account of Mr. Kennan's travels in Russia. The Egyptian court had a real dead mummy, said to be as old as California's "big trees." Hieroglyphics told an Egyptian legend, and an Egyptian newspaper was hung up for inspection, which was published in Alexandria. Cleopatra and Mark Anthony were found in a tableau, and an Arabian love song lent a charm to this old style court.

The French and German courts were elegant, and the rich German mountain songs and the soft tones of the horn were well appreciated.

The Sandwich Islands court exhibited many native weapons, models of grass houses, woven curtains and mats. The ladies were wreathed in flowers and wore the picturesque costume of the natives. Songs from the guitar and mandolin added to the attraction. The pot bow was brought out in a delicacy prepared from kolo rost was tasted by those who could be persuaded so to do.

California court was decorated with bamboo, palms, silk, pampas grass and beautiful flowers. The miners of '49 were in their tent, while near at hand were their cooking utensils, fire arms and mining cradle and pick-axe. The Indian, the trapper and the scout were all there, while the harmonica and banjo made up the miners' music. The attendants at the various courts at length formed into a procession, and in the grand march were Egyptian warriors, Grecian girls, German peasants, California miners, Spanish singers, Hawaiian natives, etc., making as they marched a curious and grotesque appearance.

The whole fair was a success. Even the title or name of "World's Fair" took from the first, and the young women's association will soon have a building in Oakland.

It is well known that there are many salubrious springs in this state and many of them are becoming noted as places of resort because of their healing waters.

But there is said to be a death dealing spring near a mountain road in Mendocino county, and the gas arising from its clear waters are alike fatal to man, bird and beast. In a clump of stunted trees between Hopland and Uriah the loud hissing sound of water is heard by the passer-by, seeming to the ear like boiling water with an occasional jet of steam. On approaching the place there may be seen lying around the spring hundreds of bird skeletons, also foxes and coons. The place is well known to the neighborhood, and the spring is given a wide berth. The story is told of a squaw who once wandered down to the spring in search of water; she inhaled the gas and was found dead, and the position, on her knees, showed she knelt to get a drink. Another story is told of a farmer's six-year-old daughter, who was missed from her home, not far away, and at length found lying dead beside the spring with a dead bird clasped in her cold fingers. It is supposed that the girl was attracted by the bright plumage of the bird lying by the spring, had run and picked it up and had inhaled the fumes of the deadly spring and died with the pretty bird in her hand.

The colors of our flag are the famous "red, white and blue." The red signifies divine love, valor and war. To soften this the white lends truth, hope, purity and peace, while "blue" crowns them with loyalty, sincerity and justice.

Our present flag contains forty-four stars, which are arranged in the following order: The upper and lower rows have eight stars, and the second, third, fourth and fifth rows consist of seven stars each. When used separately, the blue union containing the stars is called the Union Jack.

It may be of interest to know that the original flag, the first one ever known to exist as the emblem of the original thirteen states, was carried in the great G.A.R. procession in Boston on the twelfth of August, 1865. The owner of this torn but glorious ensign is Mrs. Harriet R. P. Stoddard of Cottage City.

The latest and one of the noblest chapters in the history of our flag is the presentation of the flag by patriotic citizens to the schools in America. The young Americans are learning more and more to care for their country, and the time may come for them to prove their loyalty. If America should have another war, there will be plenty of brave men to fight for their country, and women, too, it may be hoped, that she will have reason to be proud of.

Let us strive to be able to say with Daniel Webster: "When the standard of the Union is raised and waves over my head, the standard which Washington planted on the ramparts of the Constitution, God forbid that I should enquire whom the people have commissioned to unfurl it, and bear it up; I only ask, in what manner, as an humble individual, I can best discharge my duty in defending it."

STRUCK TWICE WITH A KNIFE BY ALPHONSO BOULEN.

James Woodlock of Brighton, a brakeman in the employ of the Boston & Albany railroad, was seriously stabbed on an outward bound passenger train from Boston just as it reached the Newton Highlands station, about 6 o'clock last Saturday evening.

His assailant was Alphonso Boulen, a Canadian, residing in Newton Upper Falls.

Contributions in any amount are thankfully received, and will be acknowledged in the financial report which is issued at the close of each school year, and sent to every contributor.

I have accepted from the board of Trustees the appointment of financial agent, to aid Mr. Booker T. Washington, the principal of the school, in raising the money needed for current expenses, and for the enlargement of the impetively called for. Mr. Washington's time and strength are now too heavily taxed and he is deserving of cordial assistance.

The Tuskegee school, inaugurated and wholly managed by the colored people themselves, is a revelation to the north of the method most likely to be successful in the solution of the Negro problem. Give the bright colored young men and women free scope for growth and asserting their own manhood and womanhood, such as this school affords them, and they will go forth in their full strength to meet the responsibilities of life, and recognizing the means by which they have attained the power to do, they will establish other Tuskegees, and thus themselves solve the great problem.

But they must be helped. Will you not aid in putting this institution, the only one in the country which is exclusively the product of the colored people, upon a permanent basis?

Very sincerely yours,
W. A. BENEICK.

A JUNIOR INTERSCHOLASTIC GAME.

NEWTON HIGH, NOBLE'S AND BROWNE & NICHOLS TIED FOR THE LEAD.

Newton high, by playing the best kind of foot ball, defeated the Noble's eleven 32 to 1 at Newtonville, Wednesday, and so the Junior Interscholastic series stands a tie between Newton, Noble's and Browne & Nichols.

The game Wednesday was a fine exhibition, especially on the part of the Newton high team. The work of her backs was great, Blake, the full-back, easily carried off the honors. Every time he got the ball he made telling gains, and once he got the ball when it was within 10 yards of Newton's goal, and rushed from that point down the field and scored a touchdown.

Noble's eleven were somewhat crippled by not having the services of two of their best men. The backs did well. Payson, if he had received better blocking on, would have scored at least on one occasion. Sleeper made all his gains through the centre, but he fumbled badly at times and lost the ball.

Newton scored 16 points in the first half and 22 in the second. The teams:

A Remarkable Edict of the Emperor of China.

The religions of the West (Christian countries) have for their object the inculcation of virtue, and though people become converts they still remain Chinese subjects, and continue to be amenable to the jurisdiction of the local authorities.

There is no reason why there should not be harmony between the ordinary people and the adherents of (foreign) religions, and the whole trouble arises from lawless ruffians fabricating baseless stories, and making an opportunity for creating a disturbance.

These significant extracts from a recent edict of Kuang Hsu, Emperor of China, surely show that even in our day "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform."

Almost simultaneous riots in many provinces have caused the Emperor of China to feel his "dragon throne" begin to tremble. The Omnipotent has, on a moment's notice, caused "the wrath of man to praise Him," by making this heathen emperor, on June 13, 1891, issue this most remarkable edict to the hundreds of millions of his subjects.

Never before in this empire has the status of Christianity been so clearly and authoritatively stated. Even since Christianity made an entrance into this "Middle Kingdom" many Chinese, considering Christianity a seditious organization, have kept themselves aloof from examining its claims, while many others, convinced of its truth, have feared to unite with the Christian church, lest they should be branded as traitors, or at least, disloyal to the Chinese government.

This imperial edict completely sweeps away all such doubts and fears. It distinctly states "though people become converts they still remain Chinese subjects."

Hereafter, any or all of China's millions may know that they can become Christians without in the least dissolving allegiance to the Chinese government. In fact there is greater religious liberty in China today than in Russia, and in some other European countries.

In China, by this imperial edict, Christianity has lastly enough.

The call last year, at the General Missionary Conference in Shanghai, for one thousand new missionaries within five years, was not a whit too soon. Now, then, let all loyal Christians earnestly beseech the throne of grace. Let generous gifts strengthen our forces and carry on the work. Let the God-chosen recruits promptly fill our ranks. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few." Pray, give! come!

COSTELLO WHIPPING CASE.

MISS PADDOCK OFFICIALLY SUSPAINED IN PUNISHING THE GIRL.

A meeting of the Ward 3 district committee of the Newton school board was held at the residence of Mrs. Abby E. Davis, Greenwood Avenue, West Newton, Saturday afternoon, for the purpose of considering the case of Miss Elizabeth Paddock, a teacher in the Franklin school, charged with cruelly whipping Nellie Costello, one of her pupils, on Oct. 12.

The members of the committee present were Mrs. Davis, Rev. H. U. Munro and Mr. Lawrence Bond.

The fact was brought out that the teacher suffered great provocation before resorting to punishment of the Costello girl. It was shown that the girl had bitten and kicked the teacher, whose thumb was sprained in the encounter.

The rule of the school board which provides that every moral means shall be used before resorting to corporal punishment, and then only with the permission of either of the head master or superintendent of schools, was considered in coming to a decision in the case, as it had been said that Miss Paddock administered the punishment without obtaining the necessary permission from her superiors.

It was found that authority had been given Miss Paddock by the superintendent of schools, not especially in the Costello case but to cover all cases in her class during the present term. Similar authority had been given to other assistant teacher in the city, the object being to render unnecessary the trouble of going to the head master in every individual case.

The committee unanimously voted to sustain Miss Paddock in the Costello case, deciding that the punishment was merited, and not brutal, as charged.

The injuries to the girl's arm, in the opinion of the committee, had been greatly aggravated by her resistance to the teacher's authority.

The genuine medicines can only be sold by druggists, at the above prices. There are more ways than one to make a profit, even at "cut prices." Unscrupulous dealers tamper with the bottles, or refill empty ones—and such mixtures can be sold cheaply. But every bottle of Dr. Pierce's genuine medicines is guaranteed. If it fails to give satisfaction in any case, you have your money back.

Can anything else, at any price, be really cheap?

You pay only for value received.

Something else, that pays the dealer better, may be offered as "just as good." Perhaps it is, for him, but it can't be, for you.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

I know from personal experience what it is to be a sick man, to lie in bed with the blood chilled through for days, followed by burning and parched skin, to be surrounded with comforts and the tender care of my family, and to have the sympathy of the out side world. I also know how much pleasure there is in being a convalescent, when, after a lapse of months you are permitted to see your friends. Then it is that this beautiful world seems bright and then it is that one asks himself, how about his neighbor.

How often did my mind revert to the sufferings of those that were deprived of the blessings that I had, and how often would I think of the good the Newton Cottage Hospital was doing, not only in tenderly taking care of the sick but making the life of the convalescent happy by such peaceful surroundings.

The people of Newton are always ready to do good if they only realize where it is needed. They can and will be all the better wards, how tenderly the sick are taken care of, soothed and made comfortable by the intelligent and patient nurses, and faithful and self-sacrificing doctors.

Reader, have you ever been sick and needed the comforts that lightened up the sick room. If so, you can realize what the Newton Cottage Hospital is doing.

What are you doing for the Hospital? It needs not only your financial help but your personal interest. This may lead you to remember in His name the sick of our city taken care of at the Newton Cottage Hospital.

It won't cost you one-half as much, really cheap?

Send three cent stamps for postage, and we will send you Dr. Kaufer's new world record plates from him, on disease, its causes and home cure. Address, A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass.

25 cents per vial.

Comp. Ext. Smart-Weed, 50c. per bottle.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, .50 cents per bottle.

The genuine medicines can only be sold by druggists, at the above prices.

There are more ways than one to make a profit, even at "cut prices."

Unscrupulous dealers tamper with the bottles, or refill empty ones—and such mixtures can be sold cheaply. But every bottle of Dr. Pierce's genuine medicines is guaranteed. If it fails to give satisfaction in any case, you have your money back.

Can anything else, at any price, be really cheap?

You pay only for value received.

Something else, that pays the dealer better, may be offered as "just as good."

Perhaps it is, for him, but it can't be, for you.

HE DISCUSSES STATE AND NATIONAL ISSUES AT A PROHIBITION RALLY.

Rev. Sam Small of Georgia was the star attraction at a largely attended and enthusiastic Prohibition rally held in the City Hall, West Newton, Tuesday evening. It was the first public political meeting, under the auspices of the Newton Prohibitionists, in the present campaign. There was a large representation of colored men in the audience.

The meeting was called to order by Chairman Partridge of the state committee.

Mr. F. F. Davidson of Auburndale presided, and made a short introductory address. He was followed by John Dunham, an eloquent young colored man from North Carolina, and Mr. James H. Wolf of Boston, familiarly known in political circles as the father of the Armstrong movement. Mr. Wolf said among other things that he wanted the colored men to vote the Prohibition ticket because it was their duty and because the Prohibition party represented the true principles upon which the Republican party had won all its victories in the past.

The Prohibition party was willing to vote for a colored man for a state office, and for the interests of the colored race it is necessary to elect colored men to office. Their influence is needed in obtaining employment for and promoting the welfare of the colored people.

Rev. Sam Small was accorded a hearty welcome. He commenced his address by statements in proof of the constitutionality of prohibition. Continuing, he said:

The Prohibition party is in the fight for national supremacy, and we intend, sooner or later, to rule this country by the principle of temperance, for the peace, comfort, happiness and sobriety of our people. Some one says you can't make sober men by statute! What fool ever said you could? Prohibition is not argued as a means of making men sober by law. It is advocated, however, to quit making men drunk by law.

A great deal of interest is taken in the movements of the Prohibitionists just now in this state, he said. The Republicans, especially, are troubled with the activity and enthusiasm of the Prohibition campaign, although they say they can't tell where we get the money to carry it on, and insinuate that the necessary funds come from the treasury of the Democratic party. That is not true.

Why Lodge proved that the Democrats themselves were hard up. The Republican speakers, by the way, have been doing young service in the way of recruiting to the Republican fold the strays who last year refused to swallow the McKinley bill. They are saying you voted against the McKinley bill ignorantly, and we now want you to follow your true teachers and leaders. What a sight it will be to see these non compos Republicans crawling through Henry Cabot Lodge's widely extended legs. I want to be around and view the procession.

[Applause.]

In conclusion, the speaker made an earnest appeal for the principles of prohibition, urging his auditors to vote the entire Prohibition ticket.

I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—B. F. Liepner, A. M., pastor of the Oliver Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

—Mr. Samuel D. Garey died Thursday at 6 o'clock at his home on Pleasant street. He has resided in Newton Centre for 20 years, and has been during that time a builder and carpenter, and has built many houses in this vicinity. He was born in Auburn, Me., in 1825, and removed while a boy to Saco, where he was engaged in a boat-building business until his removal to this place. His son is a member of the firm of Garey & English, prominent builders here, and while his health permitted Mr. Garey was very active in business. The funeral services will be held on Saturday at 10 o'clock, and the interment will be in Saco, Me.

—The Indian Library department fair was very successful, and a goodly sum was raised for the important work which is in charge of Miss Francis Sparhawk. It opened Wednesday in Associates' Hall, the sides of which were lined with tables, arranged in the form of booths, very prettily decorated, and containing some of the attractions. The art table had decorated china, pencil sketches and paintings from local artists, and was in charge of Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Newell of Winchester. The fancy table was in charge of Mrs. Eliza Bassett; books, Mrs. S. A. Sylvester; candy, Miss Tounison; dolls, Miss Fenniss; pianoforte table, Richard J. Weiss and John Wilkinson; Indian table, upon which they had many specimens of the work done at Hampton and Carlisle, the gifts of the schools to the cause, and there were other attractive tables in charge of various ladies who had a large corps of assistants. The first evening Mrs. Erving Winslow generously gave her services for the cause, and entertained the audience with a varied repertory of readings. Mrs. Winslow read several in chairs, thus attracting the spectator not distracted by motion or gestures, and her style of reading is the perfection of art, in which the art is so carefully concealed that the audience hardly realize the careful study and long training that has produced so finished a result. The story from Kipling, and the sketches from Miss Wilkins and Miss Barry held the audience enthralled for over an hour.

The desire to hear Mrs. Winslow called out a very large audience who felt more than repaid. The second evening The Thespians gave "My Uncle's Will," and another large audience was present, the play being capably given, and the members winning much praise for their excellent work. The success of the fair is very satisfactory and Newton has done something to aid in educating the Indian. Miss Sparhawk is entitled to the credit of the success of the project, and if any who could not attend wish to aid in sending good reading matter to the Indians she will be glad to receive their subscriptions.
